U.S. Workers Protest New SEC Order For Economy

C. I. O. Local No. 5 Acts To Have Ruling Modified.

Declares Burden Is Put on Employe

Jobs Now Vacant Are Abolished, Promotions Suspended.

By William V. Nessly.

Immediate protest from Government employes yesterday greeted an economy order issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission abolishing all positions now vacant and announcing suspension of general promotions throughout the organization.

The commission's action was taken in response to President Roosevelt's call for all Government departments and independent agencies to save at least 10 per cent of their appropriations for the current fiscal year in order to bring the national budget more nearly into balance. Close scrutiny of and reductions, wherever possible, in "other obligations," such as telephone calls, travel and subsistence, also were ordered by the commission.

Local Makes Protest.

Before the day was over, however, SEC Local No. 5, of the United Federal Workers of America, the new C. I. O. union, was taking action to bring about modification of the order. A letter was drawn up, addressed to the commission, protesting vigorously against the economy methods adopted and holding that the order placed the brunt of the entire economy movement on the shoulders of the employes.

Meanwhile, fear was spreading that similar orders would be issued by other agencies and prove a serious handicap to the personnel, blighting all hope of promotions or pay increase during the ensuing year, irrespective of the excellence of the service given.

The SEC has some 1,140 employes and a budget of $3,850,000. A saving of 10 per cent would reduce expenditures by $385,000.

Already action has been taken, also, by Rural Electrification Local No. 6 against an economy order issued by REA, sharply restricting promotions and salary raises and providing for the filling of very few vacancies that may occur in the course of the year.

Landis Backs Economy.

In announcing the SEC plan, Chairman James M. Landis, of the Commission, said:

"It should obviously be our purpose to support as strenuously as we can the efforts of the President to promote economy in the operations of the public service.

"The program outlined will permit the effectuation of this purpose certainly without bringing about the loss of any job and, I trust, without curtailing our ability adequately to perform the duties imposed upon us under the law. * * * Enough flexibility is present in the existing budgetary policy to permit this method of effecting savings to be accomplished, I hope, without either curtailing essential operations or affecting the morale and quality of our personnel."

Vacancies Abolished.

The commission's program included these points:

1. No program of general promotion during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938.
2. All existing vacancies abolished.
3. Savings in allotments for divisions and regional offices from the abolition and savings resulting from having filled vacancies at salary rates below those paid previous incumbents shall be returned to the administrative reserve account.
4. Abolition of vacancies that occur during the fiscal year except those offices considered indispensable by the commission.
5. Holding to an "absolute minimum" the cost of "other obligations," particularly travel and subsistence, long-distance calls, purchase of supplies and equipment and payment of mileage and fees to witnesses.

Later in the day members of Local No. 5, under the presidency of M. V. Freeman, held a meeting at which means of bringing about modification of the order were discussed.

M. H. Naigles, vice president of the local, announced a petition was sent to the commission holding the proposed steps would be "disastrous" to the employes and harm-

Sorrow Fails to Strike Aged Farm Couple Until Declining Years; Mother 'Sticks It Out;' Four of Their Children, Grandson and Their 'Baby' Killed in Flaming Wreck, First Deaths in Family.

A pictorial safety lesson from a traffic horror—Page 22.

By Christine Sadler.

During their 43 years of married life Henry and Anna Lammers had known their share of small worries. Their farm had been flooded with rain when they needed sun, and drought had parched their crops into dry fodder. There had been bills to meet and back-breaking work to do.

But until yesterday morning they had been spared the real sorrow that death brings. The youngest of their 13 children was almost 14 years of age, and they had begun to think they would realize the desire of old couples everywhere—to live until their sons and daughters were grown and in homes of their own.

Then, in one automobile accident, were killed their three youngest children, an older daughter, a 7-year-old grandson, a step-grandson and the 17-year-old daughter of a cousin who lived on an adjoining farm.

"I'm just beginning to understand it," the 79-year-old husband said last night, his deep-set eyes filled with tears. Until he had a touch of sickness a year ago Henry Lammers was one of the strongest and hardest working farmers between Bowie and Laurel, Md.

The neatness of the 115-acre farm to which he brought Anna as a bride, its orchards, vineyards and green fields are a tribute to his strength and thrift.

"They were our three baby children, but I am trying to stick it out," Mrs. Lammers said. Her clear blue eyes were dry, as if she found it hard to believe or was accustomed to "sticking it out" for her family.

"Mother's a brick. She knows how to stand things," the older children said. "She's comforted us all our lives and that is what she is doing now."

The 13 Lammers children range in age from 40 to 13. Three daughters and Bernard, a 21-year-old son, were killed. Four daughters and five sons survive. Three of the daughters are married. Cecilia, in whose automobile the seven were riding, works in Washington. Bernard was the last son left on the farm as a worker, the others holding jobs which keep them away most of the time. None of the sons is married.

The grandchild who was killed, little David Manning, had lived in the home for two years and was the acknowledged "baby of the family." Mrs. Lammers was proud yesterday of the bravery he showed in informing officers of who was in the automobile and giving their addresses.

"But he never spoke to any of us. He didn't know his mother when she got to the hospital," his grandmother said.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Lammers visited the scene of the accident nor has yet been to the undertaking establishment in Laurel where the six charred remains and the body of David will be until funeral services at St. Mary's Church Sunday afternoon.

"We begged them not to go and we thought it would be best for no funeral to be held here," an

Belgian King Urges World Economic Unit

All Nations' Co-operation Proposed by Leopold to Van Zeeland.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, July 23.—King Leopold of Belgium tonight proposed the establishment of an independent world economic organization free of national influences to solve the "great problems which menacingly confront humanity."

Hailing the reception of Premier Paul Van Zeeland in the United States as a "favorable augury," the King said "we must have courage to tackle the economic question in its entirety."

The King, in a letter addressed to the premier, who recently returned from economic conferences with President Roosevelt at Washington, said there should be an independent institution to study the world's economic problems, "relying on the co-operation of experts in industry, trade, agriculture, finance and labor from all nations."

Van Zeeland, at the behest of Great Britain and France, has been making an extensive study of ways and means of breaking down world trade barriers and solving economic issues.

The Belgian ruler wrote the premier, in part:

"At this moment when you are about to set out the preliminary results of your inquiry, allow me to make a suggestion: It would be essential to create an organism of economic studies whose value would be emphasized by the triple character of universality, permanence and independence.

"The continuous adaptation of or-

Marshall Field Widow Victim Of Pneumonia

By the Associated Press.

Beverly, Mass., July 23.—Mrs. Delia Spencer Caton Field, 84, widow of Marshall Field, Chicago merchant, died tonight of pneumonia at her summer home at Prides Crossing.

The death of the Washington and Chicago society leader was announced by Frederick Bartlett, a friend of the family.

Mrs. Field came to her summer estate from Washington a month ago. She had been in poor health for several months, Bartlett said.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin J. Spencer, Mrs. Field was born near Buffalo, N. Y. Her family moved to Chicago when she was a young girl and her father was one of the founders of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett Co., wholesale hardware dealers.

In 1877 she married Arthur Caton, of Chicago, who died in 1904.

The Catons were socially promi-

St. Mary's College Bought at Auction As an 'Investment'

Oakland, Calif., July 23 (A.P.).—St. Mary's College, famed for its football teams, was sold at auction today for about 30 cents on the dollar to two San Francisco attorneys.

The purchasers, Gerald Levin and Leland Groezinger, said they bought it as an investment and did not represent the bondholders' committee.

The purchase price was $411,150. The foreclosure was ordered because of failure of the college to meet payments on $1,370,500 worth of bonds.

Report Urges New Jefferson Memorial Site

House Committee Fears 'Eyesore' if Tidal Basin Is Selected.

By Gerald G. Gross

Urging Congress not to allow the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission to make an "eyesore" of the Tidal Basin area in West Potomac Park, a 4,000-word report recommending selection of some other site will be laid before every member of the House Monday by its Library Committee.

The Post further learned last night that the Treadway bill, which would forbid the memorial commission to build at the basin, probably will come up for a House vote on Wednesday. If it is not reached on the calendar, Chairman Kent E. Keller of the Library Committee will ask for a special rule to permit its consideration on the floor.

Attacking the Boylan commission's chosen site on the grounds of cost, traffic complications, esthetic implications and proposed destruction of the Japanese cherry trees, the bristling report will be introduced regardless of plans announced July 13 by Chairman John J. Boylan to modify the scheme.

The Library Committee, which conducted hearings on the Treadway bill in April, will point out that the Memorial Commission has neglected to submit progress reports to Congress as required by the act which created it.

Its report, drafted by Chairman Keller, states that the "hearings were not held exclusively in an effort to "save the cherry trees," but to protect the Congress from subscribing to a project which would

Senate Drafts Conservative Court Change

Committee Starts Work as Roosevelt Seeks to Heal Split.

Guarantees of Further Liberal Rulings Asked by President.

By Robert C. Albright.

A moderate court reform program began to take form on Capitol Hill yesterday, as first bandages were applied to the deep party wounds torn by the abandoned Supreme Court enlargement bill.

The Administration expressed measured contentment with attainment of at least part of the President's "objectives" through the new trend of Supreme Court decisions, since February 5.

The President was represented as still feeling the country needs assurance the present liberal trend of decisions will continue. Mr. Roosevelt feels guarantees should be provided for a maximum of justice in a minimum of time.

On the ruins of the President's demolished court bill, a Senate Judiciary sub-committee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran, of Nevada, set to work on a new "procedural" reform bill to provide these guarantees.

McCarran Drafts Outline.

Named head of a sub-committee of eight, controlled by court plan opponents, McCarran turned over to the legislative drafting service the rough outlines of a measure embracing noncontroversial objectives of the original court plan. The subcommittee will meet this morning to begin the work of drafting.

It was Vice President John Nance Garner, prime mover of the settlement reached Thursday by the Senate, who yesterday loosed the first dove of peace from the Democratic Party's battered ark.

In an effort to find solid ground on which to build future party harmony, Garner arranged for a series of White House conferences between the President and leading Democratic court plan opponents.

First to smoke an Indian pipe with the President was Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, who had not set foot in the White House since the court plan dispute broke in full fury.

Split Healed, Says Burke.

Burke emerged to say he had exchanged cordial handclasps with the President, and had chatted with him happily and pleasantly. Burke said, "In my opinion the danger of a party split has been averted."

"Had the court plan been adopted, I think a party break was inevitable," said the Nebraskan, one of the first to risk Democratic ostracism by opposing the court program.

"We have taken the only course to preserve a unified party. I think now the wounds will heal rather readily and completely."

Burke said he was glad to have had the opportunity to outline to the President what the Judiciary Committee is trying to accomplish in "procedural" court reform.

"We want to get as many of the President's objectives as possible, under the restrictions now imposed," he added.

Burke meant by "restrictions" the Judiciary Committee's agreement not to touch the Supreme Court, or provide "roving" judges or a Supreme Court "proctor."

Foes on Committee.

Meanwhile, the Judiciary Committee named the eight-man subcommittee, with McCarran as chairman, to draft the new program. Serving with the Nevadan will be Senators Connally, Texas; Van Nuys, Indiana; O'Mahoney, Wyoming; Dieterich, Illinois; McGill, Kansas; Borah, Idaho, and Austin, Vermont. All but Dieterich and McGill are court plan opponents.

McCarran today will lay before the sub-committee his suggested amendments to the Sumners bill, which already had passed the House. The Sumners measure authorizes the Attorney General to intervene in lower court cases involving constitutionality of statutes, and to make direct appeals to the Supreme Court.

These features will be retained in the Senate bill. In addition, McCarran will ask the sub-committee to provide that no restraining order or injunction be issued against enforcement of a statute, unless it is

Mother Strangles, Stabs 4 Children, Commits Suicide

Flagstaff, Ariz., July 23 (A.P.).—Frantic because of a chronic ailment, a 32-year-old mother assuaged her fears of the future today by stabbing and strangling to death her four children and then turning a rusty old army rifle upon herself.

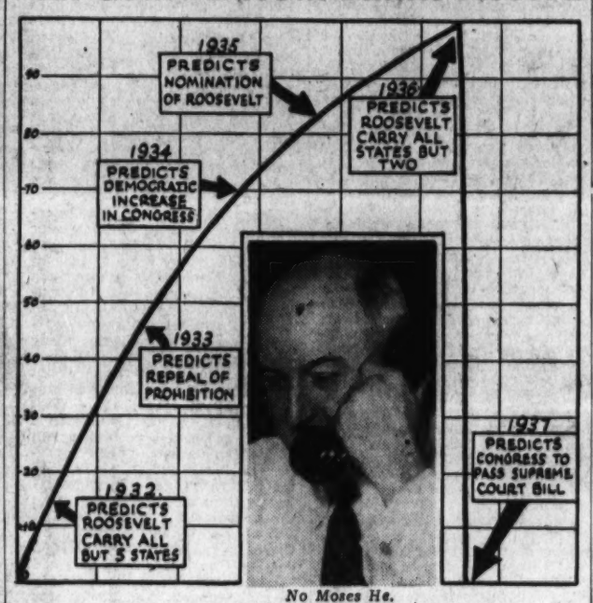
Some time during the early morning hours, Mrs. Marie Walkup slipped quietly into the bedrooms of her sleeping children. When she emerged a short time later, an army rifle under her arm, Coroner Max Miller reported, the children—Daniel, 10; Rose Marie, 8; John, 4, and Elizabeth, 29 months—were dead.

Then Mrs. Walkup sped in the family car to a nearby golf course. Holding the rifle to her body, Miller deduced, she discharged the gun with one foot. The tragedy occurred while her husband, James Walkup, chairman of the Coconino County board of supervisors, was out of the city.

Dr. M. G. Fronske, family physician, said Mrs. Walkup had been despondent over a chronic intestinal ailment and had expressed fear the children might have contracted it.

Senate Votes D.C. Tax, Adds Levy on Incomes Despite House Stand

Prophet Moses 1 Up on Farley As Court Defeat Ruins Record



No Moses He.

Postmaster General Loses Role as Infallible New Deal Sage in 70-to-20 Adverse Vote; He Leaves City Sans Seer's Robes.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Just as the conclusion of the Supreme Court fight punctured the myth of the Vice President of the United States as an Alexander Throttlebottom, so it also destroyed the reputation of Postmaster General James A. Farley as the greatest prophet since Moses.

For almost five years smiling, genial Jim Farley has been the Nation's number one prophet. Indeed, after his guesses in the last campaign he was credited with greater powers of divination than Jeremiah, Ezekial, Isaiah, Daniel, Elijah and even Moses, altogether, for, as Senator Carter Glass wrote to him, "none of the Old Testament prophets had anything on you."

It was then that Jim's Irish common sense dictated that he tempt fate no more, and he solemnly announced he was through with the political star-gazing business for good. But he did not live up to his resolution. The President's Supreme Court reorganization plan was too alluring. Seven days after that measure was sent to Congress,

Mine Workers Assail Federal Stand in Strike

Allowed Rights' Violation, Executive Board of U. M. W. Charges.

Bitter criticism of the Administration's attitude in the steel strike came yesterday from forces within the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization. It followed repeated reports in recent weeks that President Roosevelt and Lewis were near a break, though neither of the principals ever has been willing to comment publicly on the rumor. The President's most recent comment on the strike was a rebuke to extremists on both sides when he said, "A plague on both your houses."

The "complete lackadaisical and unconcerned attitude" of Federal and State governments in the "wanton murder" of 17 steel workers in the strike to date was protested in a resolution adopted yesterday by the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers, Lewis' own union, in session here. The board also approved a report submitted by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, conducting the strike for the C. I. O., in which the Federal Government was assailed for alleged disregard of the strikers' rights.

The S. W. O. C. report specifically attacked Attorney General Cummings for ordering trial of pickets accused of interfering with the mails "only three days after they were arraigned without even affording an opportunity to obtain and advise with counsel."

Another important step taken by the miners' executive board was decision not to try William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on charges of "dis-

Barkley Drafts Plan of Action On Four Bills

Includes New Court Move, Housing and Income Tax Measures.

By Sidney Olson.

Congress took a look yesterday for the so-called legislative log-jam that had been supposedly piling up behind the defunct court bill, and finally found it 'way back upstream.

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, yesterday outlined a four-point program for Senate action, including the wages-hours bill, housing, loophole-plugging tax legislation and a procedural court bill.

But Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, the Republican chieftain, said he had made a train reservation for August 5 and he wasn't going to change it. Cloakroom talk turned for the first time in months to the concrete possibility of fishing trips, with the date of August 7 mentioned wistfully.

The full effects of the Senate's prolonged jag on the President's court bill were visible for the first time yesterday, when the leaders looked around for the heavy program recommended by the President and found that very little of it was ready for consideration.

The Black-Connery wages-hours bill, amended to eliminate all but the most conservative objections, is ready for consideration. Barkley indicated the Senate would probably begin work on it late Monday.

The Wagner housing bill, revised by the Senate Labor Committee, was at last reported yesterday.

The housing measure had been

Senators Act (Quietly) to Get Civil Service for Their Clerks

The Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday quietly reported a bill which would enable members of Congress to have their clerks transferred to civil service rolls without submitting to an examination.

Over the adverse recommendation of the Civil Service Commission, the committee reported the bill, introduced by Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, which amends the civil service law to provide as follows:

"From and after the effective date of this act, any person who shall be on the rolls of the secretary of the Senate or clerk of the House of Representatives and who shall have served for four consecutive years as a clerk or assistant clerk to a Senator and/or as a clerk to a Representative and/or as a clerk or employe to the several committees of the House and the Senate may be appointed to a position in the competitive classified civil service of the United States without examination upon such tests of fitness as the commission may deem proper."

The report sought to justify the action on the ground that many legislative employes serve for years [illegible] only to lose out with the [illegible] in Representatives and Senators.

Harry B. Mitchell, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, in objecting to the bill, pointed out

Borah, La Follette Defy Warnings of Death in Conference.

Omnibus Bill Otherwise Intact; Compromise Is Predicted.

By James D. Secrest.

The Senate yesterday passed the omnibus District tax bill but with an income levy substituted for a "luxury" sales tax in the face of warnings that the House would not retreat in its adamant opposition to any form of income tax.

Even the District Committee, which reported the "luxury" sales tax to the Senate, failed to defend it on the floor.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who handled the bill, accepted the income tax substitute with no resistance after Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, had taken the lead in bombarding the sales tax.

La Follette, who moved to substitute the income tax, answered warnings from Chairman King, of the District Committee, and McCarran regarding the House attitude, with the statement:

"It is wholly untenable for the Senate committee to abdicate because a committee of the House or the House itself refuses to consider an income tax."

Borah Scorns "Surrender."

Senator Borah, following implied criticism of the House's stand, said:

"Shall we surrender or are we a legislative body?"

Both King and McCarran insisted that they favored the income tax, but that the committee had been advised by House members of the District Committee that the House would not accept an income tax in any form at this session.

The tax is from 1 to 5 per cent on the net income of individuals and corporations.

The exemptions are the same as those allowed by the Federal Government—thatis, $2,500 for married couples, and $500 for each dependent, and $1,000 for single persons, or married persons submitting separate returns.

The tax scales up, the 5 per cent being on incomes of $50,000 a year or more.

The omnibus tax bill's other provisions, save the Tydings rider on resale price maintenance, passed without a murmur of dissent. The Tydings proviso was accepted also, but not until after Senator King had made a prolonged attack on it.

The only other change made in the bill as reported by the District Committee was the addition of a rider authorizing the Commissioners to install parking meters whenever they deem the action proper.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who offered the parking meter amendment, had to have the tax bill recalled in order to attach it. The measure had passed while he was absent from the chamber.

Although a similar provision had been stricken from the District supply bill on a point of order, there was no opposition voiced to it yesterday.

Compromise Predicted.

With the House and Senate bills differing widely, the tax measure will go to conference early next week with its ultimate fate uncertain. Some District officials expressed fears privately that the conferees will become deadlocked, but Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the House sub-committee on District revenue, predicted that a compromise agreement will be reached.

Kennedy said he is confident that the House will not accept an income tax in any form now because of the publicity that attended its rejection of the District Committee's recommendation.

"The members aren't going to vote to tax their own salaries," he explained, "and they won't vote to exempt themselves for fear of reaction back home."

The income tax title inserted in the Senate bill is identical with the Title 9 that was eliminated from the House bill under orders of the House Rules Committee.

Provision Vague.

It consequently contains the contradictory provisions of the House bill, although Senator La Follette indicated that he intended the levy to apply to all income earned in the

Japan Orders Threefold Rise In Gold Value

Stabilization Move Adds 800,000,000 Yen in Book Profit.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, July 23.—The government's decision to revalue the gold reserves of the Bank of Japan, official bank of issue, and increase their book value nearly threefold was made public today.

Officials said the new valuation would be 280 or 290 milligrams of gold to one yen. At the new figure the bank's reserves would be about 1,300,000,000 yen.

(This valuation is still below that of the United States Government, $35 an ounce. The new Japanese figure makes an ounce of gold worth about 100 yen, about $29 at the current exchange rate.

(If translated into dollars at the rate of exchange 1,300,000,000 yen is about $377,000,000; but if it is taken into consideration that the Japanese valuation of gold still is about 17 per cent below the American the value of the bank's reserves becomes about $455,000,000.

(The book profit on Japan's revaluation has been estimated at about 800,000,000 yen.)

To keep Japanese currency stable in world markets, the government has decided to set up an exchange stabilization fund, using about 600,000,000 yen of the Bank of Japan's gold reserves at the revalued price.

The Bank of Japan also will revalue the gold reserves of the official colonial banks, Bank of Chosen (Korea) and the Bank of Taiwan (Formosa), and absorb into its own reserves part of the surpluses thus created. Nevertheless, the note issuing limits of the two colonial banks will be increased by from 100 to 140 per cent.

(Ever since December, 1931, when Japan went off the gold standard, the official bank has carried its gold reserves on its books at the old gold parity figure, which was 84.4 cents per yen in terms of devalued United States dollars. With the yen fluctuating between 20 and 30 cents, the actual value of the gold in terms of yen has been three or four times the book figures.)

Marchers to Use Jamboree Tents, Halleck Charges

A charge that army tents used by Boy Scouts during the recent jamboree in Washington are being maintained for use of hunger strikers in August was made yesterday on the House floor.

Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, called attention to the fact that many of the tents still remain on park tracts although the Boy Scouts quit the city more than a week ago.

He then exhibited circulars advertising a march on Washington scheduled for August 23 and sponsored by the Workers Alliance of America.

One of the notices stated the Quartermaster General of the Army would be asked to leave the Boy Scout tents intact so that the marchers might use them.

McNutt Reveals Diplomatic Rules

Manila, (Saturday) July 24 (AP). High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt released today the officially approved procedure for communications between foreign consulates and the Philippine commonwealth government.

When first promulgated, the suggested method caused a furore in the commonwealth.

The State Department, McNutt's release showed, ruled that foreign consulates may "appropriately" address themselves to local Philippine authorities to protect rights and interests of their nationals and appeal directly to the high commissioner in case local authorities fail to give satisfaction.

It was "suggested" that consular messages be forwarded to the commissioner for his information.

SEC Acts to Save Brokers in Crisis

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission acted yesterday to save several Los Angeles, Chicago and New York dealers in over-the-counter securities from insolvency because of speculation in mythical shares of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Lacking power for direct action, the commission asked the Investment Bankers Conference, a national organization of over-the-counter dealers, to arrange clearing-house machinery and other methods of easing the situation.

Chairman Landis said two Los Angeles dealers and one New York firm already have suspended because of the crisis.

300,000 Visit Bier As Italy Buries Marconi in State

Bologna, Italy, July 23 (AP).—The body of Guglielmo Marconi, who gave the world wireless telegraphy, today was placed in the family vault of the Marconis as Italy honored him with a state funeral.

Three hundred thousand residents of this industrial city, his birthplace, paid their last respects as the cortege moved to the Fourteenth Century monastery where final rites were held. The body had arrived earlier today from Rome, where the inventor died Tuesday.

Marconi's burial place was near the tomb of Luigi Galvani, the Eighteenth Century Bologna scientist who discovered electricity in chemical action. The body will remain there until the government selects a final resting place, which will be a National shrine.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

The Supreme Court reorganization bill is dead. There is no need for those of us who took a stand on that measure in the beginning and stuck by our position to the end to engage in any requiems or post-mortems. Little can be added to what has been said in the last six months and there is nothing to be gained, from any viewpoint, in kicking the corpse.

WALTMAN.

Something, however, remains to be said regarding two questions arising from this momentous and historic struggle. The first is, why was President Roosevelt defeated on this undertaking? The second is, why did the President insist on his Supreme Court plan for almost two months after it was obvious to most observers he was beaten?

These questions may not be answered correctly until the whole struggle passes into history and perspective is possible. Yet they are a clinical case for the microscope of the student of politics, and the observations of those close to the battle may be helpful in determining the truth.

The easiest answer to the first question is that public sentiment failed to support the President. Had a widespread popular demand for enactment of the court bill manifested itself last February and March, the bill, probably in its original form, would have been enacted into law. Not even a filibuster could have stopped the bill then, for filibusters are successful only when those conducting them find it popular to do so, as in the case of the Force Bill, a generation ago.

Here we have a situation in which popular support on a particular measure failed the President within four months after the people of the country overwhelmingly indorsed Mr. Roosevelt at the ballot box and when it was clear he had aroused a militant following among many groups and classes of people. Why did not this public sentiment manifest itself over the court bill?

There is a school of thought which contends the President's defeat on the Supreme Court plan was inevitable because he was tampering with an American institution, respected and revered by the American people even when they disagreed with it. Adherents of this view add that the President's plan would have met the same fate had he proposed it at any time during the depression.

The argument is that respect, if not awe, for the Supreme Court has been so deeply ingrained into Americans from childhood that the masses of the people would not tolerate any tampering with it under any circumstances. A corollary of that contention is that Americans, along with Anglo-Saxons generally, regard the judiciary as the bulwark of their hard-won liberties and that American courage and conscience became alive at the first threat to the maintenance of an independent judiciary.

Undoubtedly all of this is true to a great extent and was responsible for the vigor and bitterness with which the opponents, in and out of Congress, fought the plan. But I am not sure it is the full explanation for the indifference of those who were not opposed outright to the scheme.

Virtually every Washington commentator was agreed that if the Supreme Court this spring had struck down as unconstitutional the Wagner labor relations act and the social security taxes, the court bill's prospects for approval would have been greatly enhanced. Such developments, it was believed, would have aroused the apathy of great masses of people in favor of the bill. The Supreme Court maintained the status quo, and in that fact also is a part of the explanation for the President's defeat.

A few days after the President's second inaugural, Jay Hayden, correspondent of the Detroit News, made the observation that the return of economic recovery had lessened the "social pressures" and that even if he did not change, he still would find himself impotent to do things he did and might have done in his first term.

Mr. Hayden, I believe, put his finger on the crucial spot. Due to the lessening of "social pressures," Mr. Roosevelt does not now have to do some of the things forced on him in his first Administration, and he cannot do some things he would like to do, because the "social pressure" on Congress is lacking. The lack of any new or sweeping achievements on Capitol Hill at this session of Congress is evidence of that.

Evidence of it came directly under Mr. Roosevelt's eyes only the other day when a prominent publisher, who has supported most of the New Deal in the past, asked the President why he insisted on more legislation and further innovations when economic conditions were improving so speedily. This publisher pointed out that crops were good, prices up, that the unemployed rapidly were being absorbed by industry, wages were high and that, on the whole, the country was going well.

From an account of that interview made public the publisher did not seem greatly impressed by the President's reply that we were threatened by a repetition of 1929. He was willing, according to the version made public, to "let nature take its course"—and when things are going along well that is the attitude of most people. Full stomachs are not conducive to crusading, and this is the reason why the President will find it increasingly difficult to get action on economic and social innovations. People prefer the status quo—a "don't rock the boat" attitude. Experimentation is the order of the day when things are getting worse.

Consequently, in the court fight, there was a militant opposition coming from those who believed the independence of the judiciary was threatened, and there was general apathy on the part of large numbers who did not understand the issue nor care greatly about it.

• • • •

Was this not obvious to the President in May, when it became obvious to others? I do not think so. Indeed, after hearing the incident of the publisher just mentioned, I do not think the change that has come over "social pressures" is obvious to Mr. Roosevelt even now.

In the first place it is human nature which it makes it difficult for a man who won the victory achieved by Mr. Roosevelt last November to be convinced that he can be wrong and can be defeated. Moreover, there are not many people around Mr. Roosevelt with the hardihood to tell him when he is on a wrong course. He has at his side many ardent New Dealers who cannot detect the changes in fickle public sentiment.

Furthermore, it is always difficult to tell any President disagreeable things. It is especially difficult to tell a President as gracious and charming in manner as Mr. Roosevelt disagreeable things. There is a story circulating that several weeks ago the late Senator Robinson went to the White House determined to tell Mr. Roosevelt, in no uncertain terms, that the court bill was beaten, but that he lost his nerve when he entered the President's presence and undertook to reveal his message in soft terms which Mr. Roosevelt apparently misunderstood. It took the forthright, hardy Vice President Garner to break the news.

But does not Mr. Roosevelt read the newspapers, it may be asked? He does, but he has little confidence in them. He prefers to believe they are filled with propaganda against him, inspired by wealthy, reactionary publishers—and he cites the performance of the American press as a whole in the last campaign to prove his point. That is a mistake on the President's part—but it is also the fault of a great part of the American press. It demonstrates again the danger of crying "wolf" when there is no wolf.

Bill Is Introduced Barring Narcotics Possession in D.C.

A bill copied after the uniform narcotic act was introduced in the House yesterday by Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, upon request of the District Commissioners.

The measure is similar to a bill passed by both houses of Congress at the last session, but left in conference with adjournment.

The District heads pointed out that the Capital has no law which prohibits the manufacturing or possession of narcotics.

The bill, the report stated, has the backing of numerous civic orgaizations, the American Medical Association and the American Bar Association.

Indians Can't Use Algebra, So U. S. Teaches Farming

Anchorage, Alaska, July 23 (AP).—The Eklutna Government school for Indians decided today to quit pumping "culture" into the natives and to concentrate on dog breeding and reindeer farming.

Algebra, geography and the like were wiped from the curriculum. George A. Dale, acting principal, said teachers and native students found culture of little help in making a living in the north.

Cabin-building, clothes-making, reindeer farming, fishing, trapping and housekeeping, Dale said, will be taught on a Government reserve of 515 square miles.

New Deal Issue Injected in N.Y. War for Mayor

Both Parties Seize on It in Fight for 1938-40 Control.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23.—The New Deal became the major issue in New York's mayoralty campaign today as Republican and Democratic leaders seized upon it in internal struggles for control of party machinery in 1938 and 1940 National elections.

Last night's triumph of Tammany Leader James J. Dooling in getting Tammany indorsement for Senator Royal S. Copeland, New Deal foe, after a bitter pro-New Deal revolt within Tammany, removed any doubt that local issues would be submerged at least in the primary fight. The election takes place November 2.

Line-up of Factions.

The situation shaped up today as follows:

Democratic Party: Grover A. Whalen, one-time greeter of celebrities and now president of New York World's Fair Commission, is candidate of the four pro-New Deal county organizations of the city. In Tammany-controlled New York, he will be backed in the primaries by a powerful pro-New Deal minority, headed by Harlem District Leader Jimmy Hines. Senator Copeland, backed by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Tammany Leader Dooling, has official indorsement of Tammany Hall organization for New York County.

Republican Party: Five county organization leaders meet in the next few days. One substantial faction, said by veteran observers to include many of the best known conservative leaders, favors nomination of Senator Copeland on an anti-New Deal program. Another faction, which also includes many who have been prominent in city Republican affairs, favors selection of Mayor LaGuardia, fusion incumbent, on the anti-Tammany platform which brought his nomination on the Republican ticket in the last election.

LaGuardia Supported.

A third faction, headed by leaders of the Brooklyn organization, wants to have a "regular Republican" appointed. This group has not yet put forward the name of any individual candidate.

American Labor Party: While not definitely committed, its leaders have publicly recommended LaGuardia.

The chief behind the scenes opponents in the Democratic picture are Postmaster General James A. Farley and Smith. Political observers say Farley has been trying if not to control, at least to exert, national party organization influence in local political affairs. One by one he has lined up behind him the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island.

Treasure Hunter In Panama Suicide

Panama City, July 23 (AP).—Investigators who visited an ancient mine where Gaston Johannes Van Steck, a French prospector, reported having found a $3,000,000 treasure, said today Van Steck had killed himself after failing to prove his "discovery."

A representative of the Panama Star-Herald and government officials went into Chiriqui Province to confirm reports of the finding of gold supposedly hidden for centuries in tunnels along the banks of the Piedra Candela River.

Earlier official confirmation of the gold discovery was described as being due to "misinterpretation" of a message announcing the find.

Stewart Is Appointed FCA Deputy Governor

The promotion of Charles A. Stewart to the position of deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration was announced yesterday by Governor W. I. Myers. He succeeds Herbert Emmerich, who recently resigned to become associate director of the Public Administration Clearing House in Chicago.

Stewart has been associated with the FCA since 1933 and, as deputy production credit commissioner, has been active in developing the national system of production credit associations. Prior to entering the Government service, he engaged widely in the livestock field in the Middle West.

Jury Indicts Minister For Hammer Slaying

Pittsfield, Ill., July 23 (AP).—The Rev. Col. Ellsworth Newton was indicted today for murdering his former parishioner, Mrs. Dennis Kelly, with a hammer.

The former Paris, Mo., Baptist minister waited unmoved for the grand jury's report. He found solace in the biblical story of the patience of Job under many afflictions.

Senator Simmons Returns to Washington, Welcomed by President at Press Conference.

MORE LIKE A TARHEEL wraith than ever, former Senator Furnifold M. Simmons came back yesterday for the first time in several years to Washington, where for 45 years he was a commanding figure. He was the President's guest at the White House press conference, where Mr. Roosevelt said, "you older men will be glad to welcome an old friend."

Later in the day he went to the Senate floor, which he left at the end of his term in March, 1931, and greeted many of the Senators who followed his leadership when the Democrats were almost as small a minority as are the Republicans now.

Simmons is 83 years old. He was 11 when the Civil War ended. He came to Congress as a House member in 1887. Few Democrats have held as many party positions, and few have served the party over so many years. His visit recalled to many the feverish campaign of 1928, when he was among the Southern Democrats who would not accept Alfred E. Smith as the nominee, who bolted and later were defeated perhaps because of their bolts.

Without a record vote and with but little debate, it approved legislation on the subject by Senator Tydings (Democrat) Maryland. He said he had made changes eliminating former objections of the Administration.

Tyding's proposal was approved as a rider to the District tax bill.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said the Senate Railway Finance Committee has not "come to any conclusion as to the merits" of a proposed program for reorganizing the 23,000-mile Van Sweringen transportation system.

In a letter to J. M. B. Hoxsey, executive assistant to the New York Stock Exchange listing committee, he cited "published statements that I have approved of the proposed consolidation of Alleghany Corporation and the Chesapeake Corporation," the chief holding companies in the system.

"Such is not the fact," Wheeler's letter continued, noting the committee's agents have been investigating the proposal.

"The fact that the Senate committee has held no hearings on this plan should not be taken as an approval by the committee of the plan," it added.

Wheeler told reporters the committee probably would reopen hearings "within three weeks," and that the Alleghany reorganization plan might be one of the first matters taken up.

REBELLION STIRRED the House against authorizing a $10,000,000 increase in construction cost of six auxiliary naval vessels, previously limited to $50,000,000.

An overwhelming majority voted against adoption of a Senate-House Conference Committee report which recommended the authorization to meet potential construction cost increases.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the House Naval Committee, urging approval of the report, declared the proposed vessels were designed for specific military purposes and asserted he did not regard the House as competent to tell the Navy what types of vessels it should have.

But the House rejected the report by a roll-call announced as 225 to 86, and then voted to insist on its disagreement.

The report must go back to the conference committee, but Vinson told newsmen the result would be that the $50,000,000 figure previously approved by the House would be made final.

The measure carries approximately $135,000,000.

Capitol Hill was notified President Roosevelt had signed the bill authorizing the Federal Government to help tenants and sharecroppers acquire farm homes.

The measure was approved by Congress last week after the Chief Executive had urged action to halt a national trend toward agricultural tenancy.

It authorizes $10,000,000 of farm purchase loans to tenants this year. Larger outlays are authorized in future years—$25,000,000 by 1939 and $50,000,000 annually thereafter.

Advocates of the new law estimated loans for the purchase of approximately 3,000 farms can be made under this year's authorization. The total number of tenants in the country is estimated by authorities at 2,500,000. It has been increasing at the rate of 40,000 annually in recent years.

The tenancy legislation provides for two other activities designed to help low-income farmers. They are:

1. Rehabilitation loans to prevent small farm owners from slipping into tenancy, and to help tenants, sharecroppers and farm laborers improve their living standards.

2. Retirement of land unsuited for farming. In connection with this, the Government is authorized to help families now living on submarginal land acquire good land.

During the last 25 years, Mitchell continued, studies have shown that persons who attain the highest ratings in civil service examinations have the best performance records following appointments.

Replying to the Civil Service Commission, the committee called attention to another amendment to the civil service law now in effect.

Bailey Chosen By Party for Robinson Post

Demand for Primary Is Rejected by Arkansas Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., July 23.—Overriding demands from some factions that a special primary be called, the Democratic State committee today nominated 42-year-old Gov. Carl E. Bailey to be Joseph T. Robinson's successor in the United States Senate.

He will enter the special election which he himself will call, probably September 14, to fill the vacancy.

Traditionally, Democratic nomination to major office in this State is tantamount to election. Whether Bailey will be opposed in the special election by a Republican, or by fellow-Democrats running as independents, remained in doubt.

J. Rosser Venable, Little Rock World War veteran, who ran against Robinson in the 1936 Democratic primary, announced this week he would seek the seat as an independent if the State committee nominated Bailey.

State Convention Sought.

Osro Cobb, State Republican chairman, called for support of an independent Democrat, or a Republican candidate, in opposition to Bailey.

Robert Prather, State committeeman who favored a primary, announced tonight he would seek to assemble a State convention "to nominate a candidate to represent the Democrats of this State in the special election."

The party split badly over the question whether the Democratic committee should nominate or call a primary. Congressman Claude A. Fuller, of Eureka Springs, had announced he desired to offer for the Senate in a primary election, and other possible candidates had been mentioned.

Thomas Fitzhugh, chairman of the State committee, resigned from the committee this afternoon before the Bailey nomination was voted, offering as a reason a statute prohibiting State utility commissioners from engaging in the campaign of another for office. He is chairman of the utilities commission.

The committee, friendly to the Governor, promptly elected June P. Wooten, Little Rock, Bailey's intimate friend, as new chairman.

The Governor's nomination followed adoption of a sub-committee report which said poll tax payments this year were half of normal, that the cost of a primary would be excessive and that defective election laws would make fraud possible.

Bailey, a former railroad and shoe factory worker, who gained prominence as an attorney before entering politics, did not attend the committee meeting. He has been consistently friendly to the Roosevelt Administration since he became Governor last January.

London, July 23 (AP).—Viscountess Astor, American-born member of Parliament, became a "companion of honor" today at a private investiture. Rival Unions Join in Buffalo Food Embargo

1,000 A. F. of L. Truck Drivers and C. I. O. Butchers Are Idle.

By the Associated Press.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 23.—C. I. O. and American Federation of Labor lieutenants, bitter rivals on other fronts, joined hands here today in clamping down a virtual food embargo to enforce demands for a closed shop in packing plants and wholesale warehouses.

Wholesale food merchants affected by a walkout of 1,300 A. F. of L. truck drivers meantime appealed to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to intervene "in the interest of justice and the solution of a very serious situation."

State Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews, in Albany, ordered an immediate study of the strike and said he would do everything possible to encourage peaceful settlement. Acting in the absence of Gov. Lehman, who was vacationing in Hot Springs, Va., the industrial commissioner said John Watson, of the State labor mediation board, already had been instructed to attempt arbitration of the dispute.

Idle with the truck drivers were C. I. O. union butchers in three of the city's four major packing houses. Union leaders said more than 1,000 had answered the strike call.

A check of grocery store shelves indicated no serious shortage before Monday.

Guilt May Change Vote.

New York, July 23 (AP).—A vote by individual members and not by units would be taken if the international executive committee of the American Newspaper Guild at its meeting tomorrow grants a referendum on various policy questions, a spokesman said tonight. The committee is meeting to act on the petition of the Columbus, Ohio, unit for a referendum on affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Citizens' Group Plans Drive.

New York, July 23 (AP).—Dedicating itself to "preserving and protecting man's constitutional right to work," the Citizen's National Committee—recently created at Johnstown, Pa.—emerged from an all-day, executive session here and announced plans to set up State and local units on a Nation-wide scale. Naming of a "nationally known figure" to head the organization was promised.

Ford Policeman Testifies.

Detroit, July 23 (AP).—A Ford Motor Co. policeman testified today union organizers mounted a highway overpass at Ford's Dearborn plant where they were beaten May 26 after they were warned it was private property.

Albert Rasmussen, who said he has worked five years for the Ford service department, which polices the plant, was a witness at a hearing on the National Labor Relations Board complaint charging the Ford Co. with unfair labor practices and with instigating assaults on the union men.

3 Sisters, Brother, Cousins Pinned in Car; Funeral Tomorrow at Laurel.

Three sisters, a brother and their three young cousins, killed yesterday when a trailer truck struck their light car on the Crain highway near Upper Marlboro, Md., will be buried tomorrow in one casket and one grave.

Victims of one of the worst highway accidents in this vicinity in years, six of the seven, all residents of Laurel, Md., were burned to death early yesterday in their overturned machine. The seventh, youngest of the group, died a few hours later in Casualty Hospital here.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lammers, parents of four of the dead, said the single funeral service will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Laurel. The Rev. J. A. Myer will officiate, and burial will be in the church cemetery.

The dead were Bernard Lammers, 21, driver of the car, which was returning from a firemen's carnival at Glen Burnie, Md.; his three sisters, Pauline, 29, Mildred, 19, and Anna May, 13, and their three cousins, Frances Haker, 17, Francis Baldwin, 14, and David Manning, 7.

Truck Driver Bonded.

B. M. King, of Mundy Point, Va., driver of the 1½-ton truck laden with empty tin cans which smashed into the Lammers' parked car, was released yesterday under $500 bond to appear at an inquest Monday night. It will be conducted by Percy Duvall, justice of the peace.

Facing the first deaths among their 13 children, whose ages range from 13 to 40, Mr. and Mrs. Lammers were bearing up well last night. The father, who is 79, has been in failing health. His wife is 68. Their "baby" was one of the dead, 13-year-old Anna May.

King, an employe of a canning company located near Mundy Point, was en route home when the tragedy occurred. He told Sergt. Elon Turner and Officer E. C. Cissell, of the Prince Georges County police, that the bright lights of an oncoming machine prevented him from seeing the Lammers' car, which was at a standstill preparatory, it is believed, to making a U-turn.

Near Defense Highway.

Police believe Bernard Lammers, at the wheel, had "overshot" the intersection of the Defense highway and was making ready to turn around when the truck ploughed into the laughing, singing group. The scene of the crash is about 2 miles north of the junction of the Crain and Defense highways.

As the accident was reconstructed by county police, aided by King, the trailer-truck skidded some 75 feet along the left side of the highway and 40 feet more across the road "shoulder" before overturning on its side. The sedan's top was partly crushed and the seven passengers were sprayed with gasoline from the broken tank.

The bodies of all but the Manning boy were entirely consumed by the flames. Positive, name-by-name identification would have been impossible. George Lammers, a brother, was able to make up the death list only because he knew who had gone on the ill-fated outing to Glenburnie.

George believed his brother, Bernard, had driven past the Defense Highway junction and was preparing to turn around when the truck, which had been following the car for some distance, struck the sedan.

Truck Misses Stream.

Bernard might have halted the car preparatory to making a U-turn or he might have planned to back 100 feet into a dirt side road, then swing around.

The truck smashed into the left rear side of the Lammers car, breaking off the baggage compartment in the rear and crushing the body inward about 18 inches. The can-laden truck overturned on its side just short of a 15-foot culvert.

When King leaped out of the cab he fell into shallow water. Had his truck continued a few feet farther, plunging into the creek, he would have been seriously injured, perhaps killed.

The driver had to fight his way through brambles and underbrush to reach the Lammers car, in flames when he kicked in the front right window and dragged out David Manning.

David was the son of Albert Manning, an employe of the Baltimore Gas Light Co. Francis Baldwin was the son of Mrs. Theresa Baldwin, a sister of the four dead Lammers children. Frances Haker was the daughter of Henry Haker, whose farm adjoins that of the Lammers family.

The fatal collision turned the light two-door sedan upside-down. Explosion of the gasoline tank was almost instantaneous. Franklin Peach, a farmer living half a mile from the scene, rushed the Manning boy to Upper Marlboro, whence the child was removed to Casualty Hospital by the Prince Georges rescue squad.

It was impossible for Peach or King to do anything for the other six, inextricably pinned inside the burning wreckage. When rescue squads arrived from Glenn Dale and Upper Marlboro, they could only extinguish the flames and remove the bodies, which were taken to the Lloyd Kaiser undertaking home in Laurel. Dr. James H. Truitt, acting coroner of Glenn Dale, pronounced the six dead.

Police marveled that King, driver of the truck, escaped unhurt. The truck was badly damaged, and the Lammers car was demolished. Cecelia Lammers, another sister of the dead children, who is employed in Washington, was the owner of the car.

For nearly three-quarters of an hour—45 minutes that seemed like years—William A. Shytle, 45, delivery man for the Railway Express Co., lay with a broken leg in the car tracks in the 1800 block of H street northwest yesterday. Passersby did what they could to make him comfortable while frantic calls were made for an ambulance and traffic for blocks became tangled. At the first hospital called, the ambulance was out. Finally a private ambulance took Shytle to Emergency Hospital. Police said he was struck by an auto driven by Robert L. Rowe, 3728 Connecticut avenue northwest.

loyalty" to the union, but to leave action to the international convention of the union next January 25. Green has been a member of the U. M. W. since its formation in 1890. Charges against him are the outgrowth of the split between Lewis and the A. F. of L. suspension of the Lewis unions from the federation, and acceptance into the federation of the Progressive Miners of America, a union which the U. M. W. brands as an "adversary" of itself.

A trial at the convention, the board said, "will eliminate any thought of prejudice" against Green by providing "a verdict rendered by his peers, the members and the rank and file who will be delegates to that convention."

The board made public a copy of charges against Green filed by the Danville, Ill., local saying Green had violated the U. M. W. constitution by granting an A. F. of L. charter to the Progressive Miners. The constitution provides for expulsion of any member held to have "fomented, led or encouraged a dual union."

Green declined immediate comment. "My decision," he said, "will be determined by the nature of any notice I receive."

The S. W. O. C. report on the steel strike said that "not a single person has as yet been brought to account for the murder of the 17 steel workers." It said local officials in each of the steel areas had acted "in complete collusion" with steel officials and National Guard, and have "infringed in the most flagrant manner" upon the strikers' civil rights.

Strikers by the hundreds have been thrown into jail and held incommunicado, homes have been broken into, and men have been beaten and shot by local authorities, it charged, adding that the Ohio National Guard was ordered out by Gov. Martin Davey "for the express purpose of breaking the strike."

"Purported attempts on the part of some of the strike pickets to delay the introduction into the plants of food and strike breakers through the use of the mails," the report added, "has produced extraordinary activity on the part of the Federal Government in securing indictments against the strike pickets."

Meanwhile, the Labor Relations Board recessed its hearings here into charges that the Republic Steel Corporation has violated the Wagner labor relations act. The hearings will be resumed August 9, probably in Cleveland.

Before the recess, Thomas B. Smith, Canton, Ohio, insurance agent testified the Republic firm had posted bonds for special policemen hired at Massillon, Ohio, shortly before the fatal strike riot there on July 11.

John Veto, an employe of Republic who was among the strikers, described again the outbreak of firing, apparently from the ranks of the police. He said that just before the shooting started he heard one of the officers yell "'let's bust 'em up.'"

Relief From Heat Due Tomorrow, Bureau Declares

The summer's second heat wave fell on Washington yesterday, but indications last night were that in duration and severity it would be as nothing compared to the first.

The day's highest temperature was 89, resistered at 2:50 p. m. The forecast for today was continued fair with little change in temperature, with a possibility that cooler weather will return tomorrow.

Cool air yesterday broke July's second hot spell, in the Middle West, the Associated Press reported. The prospect was for generally cool weather east of the Rockies.

Meanwhile, the Census Bureau reported a 16 per cent increase in deaths in 86 major cities for the week ended July 17, which included the latter phase of the month's first heat wave. The bureau attributed the rise to high temperatures.

Deaths for the week covered in the survey totaled 8,933 as compared with 7,668 for the previous week.

School Heads Clash At Assault Trial

Greenfield, Mass., July 23 (AP).—Old differences between two former officials of Mount Hermon School were aired in court today after S. Allen Norton pointed an accusing finger at Thomas E. Elder as the man who threatened him with a gun May 23.

The ruddy-cheeked Norton told a Superior Court jury he once "reported Elder for kissing his stenographer."

The 54-year-old former cashier at a Northfield, Mass., school for boys, was one of seven witnesses placed on the stand by the prosecution in an effort to convict former Dean Elder of assault with intent to kill.

Roosevelt Leaves On Week-End Trip

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt embarked last night for a week-end yacht trip on the Potomac River and Chesapeake Bay.

He had as his guests Senator Barkley, the Democratic leader, Senator and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, and the former's brother, Gov. Phil La Follette of Wisconsin.

The party will return to Washington late tomorrow.

$357 Is Received To Aid Children

The drive to send children of the District to the new Bald Eagle Hill Camp, conducted by the Tuberculosis Association yesterday received donations totaling $357.

The fund total now amounts to $2,612, and 94 children are being cared for.

Court-Martial Urges Moving Stapler Back

Reduction by 10 Numbers Asked for Grounding of U. S. S. Tennessee.

Capt. John T. G. Stapler, U. S. Navy, commander of the U. S. S. Tennessee, when she ran aground in San Francisco Bay, June 11, will be reduced ten numbers on the promotion list if a recommendation of a general court-martial is approved by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, officials of the Navy Department said last night. Subject to the approval of the Secretary, the court also recommended that Lieut. Camdr. Hayden H. Smith, navigator of the vessel at the time of the accident, be reduced 50 numbers.

Capt. Edwin A. Wolleson will replace Capt. Stapler, who has been ordered to duty with the Asiatic Fleet, as commander of the Tennessee.

Commander Smith has been transferred to the transport Argonne as executive officer and will be succeeded as navigator of the Tennessee by Lieut. Comdr. Lyman S. Perry, who recently served as aide to the Commandant of the Navy Yard here.

Capt. Stapler served here as assistant director of naval intelligence from June, 1934, until a few weeks ago. He was in charge of public relations in the office of naval intelligence from 1924 until 1927. He left Washington after his first tour of duty here to become executive officer of the U. S. S. Arkansas, and was promoted to captain in 1931. Before returning here in 1934 he had been in command of the U. S. S. Dobbin.

For his services during the World War as commanding officer of Division 8, submarines operating on the Atlantic Coast, Capt. Stapler was awarded the Navy Cross. A native of Wilmington, Del., he maintained his home here at 2020 Hillyer place.

Capt. Wolleson, new commander of the Tennessee, served at the Navy Department in 1924, in the Bureau of Engineering and then was on duty at the Naval Academy. He was born in Belleville, Ill., October 25, 1883, and entered Annapolis in 1902. For his services during the World War while in command of minesweepers in the North Sea he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Futures Dealers Claim Commodity Act Is Void

A group of futures commission merchants attacked provisions of the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936 in the Supreme Court yesterday.

The brokers challenged constitutionality of the act, which regulates future trading on the commodities exchanges, as applied to transactions for future delivery of grain. Other merchants have challenged the act as applied to butter, eggs and white potatoes.

Two Maryland Youths Win Coast Guard Honors

Bernard R. Henry, of Annapolis, Md., and Joseph L. Horne, of Silver Spring, Md., have been appointed to the Coast Guard Academy as a result of Nation-wide competitive examinations, Rear Admiral R. R. Waasche, commandant of the Coast Guard, announced yesterday.

older son said. "We think that would be only adding to the difficulty."

Friends called at the Lammers home all day yesterday, scores of them. Some of them were friends of their dead children and unknown to the parents, but all got the same friendly welcome. "The sympathy is making us stronger," Mrs. Lammers said.

Anna Lammers was but 18 years old when she came to live on the farm where she yesterday received the saddest news of her lifetime. As she talked to friends and neighbors, her thoughts kept returning to the early days.

"We lived in a little house there by the gate when the children were born. Just a few years ago we built this house. Henry's brother owned the farm next to this, and we didn't think about dividing the acres until the children began to grow up. This is a good farm and we have been happy here."

The present Lammers home is two-storied, square and frame. In the yard are several black locust trees and old-fashioned flowers. A red bird-box, built for David, has a place on a post near the front walk. Just outside the white paling fence, old Rose-of-Sharon bushes are in full bloom. Farm implements are scattered around, for Bernard was to work early on the morning after the carnival. The barns are painted red and have a well-kept look.

Talk of the mass funeral plans was low, and kept from the father and mother, for the older Lammers children think the strain is going to be almost too heavy to bear when their parents go to St. Mary's Sunday for the services.

"We want to spare them all we can until then."

Naval Affairs Group Opposes Airport in Md.

Supports Leahy Stand as Officers Testify on Radio Interference.

Opposition to the construction of an airport at the proposed Camp Springs site was expressed yesterday by a unanimous vote of the sub-committee on aeronautics of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

The vote sustained the Navy's objections to the proposed air terminal which were made known Tuesday in a letter from Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, to Chairman Carl Vinson, of the committee.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, chairman of the commission which selected the Camp Springs site, said last night that the sub-committee's action would have no effect on his intended course. "It may hold up the appropriations in the House," he said, "but I am going to introduce a bill in the Senate which will provide for the construction of the Camp Springs Airport with Federal funds."

At the hearing before the sub-committee naval officials, headed by Rear Admiral C. N. Courtney, director of naval communications, testified airport radio operations at Camp Springs would interfere with signals at the Navy's new million-dollar receiving station at Cheltenham, Md., about three miles away. The 300-foot towers which the Navy plans to construct, Admiral Courtney added, would be a hazard to planes landing at the Camp Springs site.

The District Airport Commission was not represented at the hearing before the subcommittee, and the sole witness who testified in favor of the proposed site was Ben King, local sportsman pilot and civil engineer, who is the holder of eight world records.

King denied that the ignition of airplane engines would interfere with the radio receiving station at Cheltenham, declaring that all planes permitted to use the new airport would have engines shielded to prevent interference. The radio towers at Cheltenham, he declared, would not be hazardous because they were so far from the terminal, and would be located on lower ground.

Representative Melvin J. Haas, of Minnesota, a major in the Marine Corps Aviation Reserve, presented the motion sustaining the Navy's objections to the Camp Springs site, and putting the committee on record in favor of taking "all steps possible to block construction of an airport at Camp Springs."

Navy Claims "Priority."

Commander Wilbur J. Ruble, naval communications expert, told the committee that construction at Cheltenham had started almost a year ago. He pointed out that the site had been chosen because it was away from the city, removed from automobile traffic, and not on any airline route. He reaffirmed Admiral Courtney's statement, declaring that the question from the Navy's point of view was primarily one of priority.

Road's Closing Asked.

The closing of Military road, and the filling in of Boundary Channel would be authorized by a bill introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, a member of the House Military Affairs Committee.

The measure requires that in return for Military road the terminal company should pay not to exceed $25,000 to the Board of Commissioners of Arlington County for the construction of a new road. It would also authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to lease to the airport the 53 acres of the experimental farm east of the railroad.

Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, who served as secretary of the commission which picked Camp Springs site, said Wednesday the terminal company, if authorized to close Military road, would make needed improvements in the present field.

Chang Hsueh-liang Revealed as Donor To Church Causes

A new angle on the strange history of Marshal Chang Hseuh-liang—Chinese war lord whose name is conspicuously absent from news reports on the present Sino-Japanese disturbance—was revealed here yesterday by announcement that in years past he has given about $100,000 to the Seventh Day Adventist Sanitarium in Hankow.

Dr. J. L. McElhany, president of the Seventh Day Adventists, at headquarters in Takoma Park, said that the marshal "practically built our sanitarium at Mukden and in more recent years has contributed liberally to our newer sanitarium in Hankow."

Presumably on a world tour with $100,000 given him for that purpose by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek after the latter's kidnaping and release by him several months ago, Chiang has not made recent newspaper copy.

He is reported to be deeply interested in the movement of Christianity in China and to have given financial aid to various Christian denominations.

The son of the grim Manchurian warrior, Chang Tso-lin, whose assassination at Mukden created an international furor, Marshal Chang at one time ruled more than 100,000,000 people. Although almost 40, he still is known in China as "the young marshal."

Gay Parties Reported At Slain Doctor's Home

Providence, R. I., July 23 (AP).—Stories of gay nocturnal parties at the home of Dr George W. Webster puzzled police investigating the slaying of the fashionable society physician.

Deputy Police Superintendent James J. Cusick said the parties reported held at the fashionable Webster town house were stag, "so far as I could learn." He eliminated from the case a report a jealous husband had threatened Dr. Webster publicly at a party some time prior to the crime.

Pastors Defy Nazis in Notes Written Police

Clerics Notify Gestapo of Continued Disobedience; More Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 23.—A group of defiant Protestant pastors sent letters to the German secret police today announcing their continued disobedience of Nazi church decrees.

The churchmen declared their continued support of 149 of their brothers already arrested—of whom 44 are still in jail—and wrote the gestapo (police) they "felt compelled" to continue their opposition.

(The Confessional Synod has opposed what its leaders have called the government's attempts to inculate a new religion based on the old German mythology. Prominent in the fight has been the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, arrested July 1.)

Ten Dortmund and Berlin Protestant preachers have been arrested in the last three days.

The German press showed irritation over the decision by the World Conference on Church Community and State, meeting at Oxford, to send a message of sympathy with the German Protestant Church. Newspapers condemned "meddling from abroad."

Two Catholic chaplains were given prison terms of three years and 18 months, respectively, at Nurnberg on charges of contributing to a minor's delinquency, and the Rev. Rupert Mayer, Jesuit priest, was given a six-month suspended sentence in Munich on charges of preaching against the government.

Richard Bennett Files as Bankrupt

New York, July 23 (AP).—Richard Bennett, father of Constance and Joan Bennett of movie fame, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in United States District Court today.

The veteran actor listed liabilities of $6,157 and no assets except insurance policies with a contingent value of $50,000, payable to Angela Bennett.

Most of the liabilities were Federal and State income taxes, with his largest creditor listed as Joan Bennett Markey, of Beverly Hills, Calif., who lent him $800 on an automobile.

Carolina Company Lists Power Plan

By the Associated Press.

The Carolina Aluminum Co. submitted to the Federal Power Commission yesterday details of its plan to build a $6,000,000 hydro-electric plant, of 54,000 horsepower, at Tuckertown, on the Yadkin River, near Badin, N. C.

The company, a subsidiary of the Aluminum Co. of America, wants a ruling on the navigability of the Yadkin River, which, if navigable, would be under the commission's jurisdiction.

Loan of $30,000,000 To RFC Reported

New York, July 23 (AP).—The New York Sun said today it had learned the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in a special transaction, had borrowed more than $30,000,000 from a large New York commercial bank.

The Treasury usually provides funds for the big Government lending agency.

The most logical explanation, the Sun said, was that the RFC was replenishing its cash, possibly in connection with agricultural loans made by it.

Nazis to Tax Men Who Fail To Join Army

Jews, Barred From Military Service, Will Pay Heavily.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 23.—Germany today imposed a special tax on eligible males who fail to serve in the military forces "to penalize men who continue to make money while their brothers serve the country."

Effective September 1, the tax will fall heavily on Jews, disqualified from service. It applies to males born in or since 1914.

An estimated 350,000 youths, rejected from the classes of 1914, 1915 and 1916, comprise the total of those called to service thus far who will be required to pay the tax.

In all except the lower income brackets, the special tax adds 50 per cent to the present income tax the first two years a German normally would be called to military service. Thereafter, it will continue at the rate of 6 per cent of the income tax until the age of 45.

Those who pay only a small income tax or none will have 4 per cent deduced from their wages during the two years they normally would be serving in military, naval or labor forces, and one-half of 1 per cent during the following years.

Men without regular wages and with incomes too small for income taxes would pay 5 per cent for the two years and 0.6 per cent thereafter.

Persons earning less than 52 marks monthly, about $21, are exempt.

Those rejected from service because they are physically unfit must pay the new tax, but if physical disqualification comes after they actually have started compulsory army, navy or labor service they are exempt because they "obviously tried to fill their obligations."

AirCooling Creates Huge New Market

The Commerce Department pointed out "a potential market for millions of dollars worth of waterworks and sanitary equipment," in reporting yesterday that increasing use of air conditioning equipment has taxed municipal sewerage and water supply facilities, because some cooling units discharge large quantities of water.

Saying installations increased 1,400 per cent between 1933 and 1937, a department report added that some cities may be forced to enlarge sewerage and water supply plants.

White Wing's Kin Loses Stolen $1,000 Gold Toy

Newark, N. J., July 23 (AP).—A gold Japanese buddha household shrine, stolen July 13 from the Newark Museum, has been the toy of a street cleaner's infant nephew. It was insured for $1,000.

An 11-year-old boy, who police said stole the shrine, hid it in a parking lot. The street cleaner found it and took it home to his nephew. He returned it in response to a newspaper advertisement.

Japan Prepares To Keep Army In North China

Nanking Denies Ratifying Sung's Pact; Tokyo Hails Accord.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, July 23.—Chinese and Japanese hatreds in North China, at boiling point for 16 days, appeared tonight to have cooled enough to make war in the near future unlikely.

Withdrawal of the Chinese Thirty-seventh Division from the Peiping area changed the complexion of a situation which had been close to war since soldiers of that unit and Japanese first clashed 10 miles west of Peiping the night of July 7.

It met Japan's most urgent condition for restoration of peace and marked beginning of Chinese fulfillment of the latest of the four-year series of local military agreements by which the Japanese army has steadily strengthened its power in North China.

Four Terms Listed.

The Japanese assert this agreement was made between their high command and Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan, head of the semiautonomous North China regime. They said he accepted its terms orally Sunday at Tientsin, then confirmed them in writing Monday at Peiping. The Japanese version said it provided for:

1. Elimination of persons "impeding" Sino-Japanese relations.
2. Complete suppression of Communists.
3. Stricter control of anti-Japanese organizations and anti-Japanese education.
4. Evacuation of the Thirty-seventh Division of Gen. Sung's Twenty-ninth Army, which the Japanese said was hostile to them.

Japanese reports said the central Chinese government had accpeted Gen. Sung's pact. At Nanking, however, officials said the Nanking government had not even seen the pact and could not have approved it.

Experienced observers believed the North China situation still held the seeds of grave trouble. They pointed out Japan's military strength there had been more than doubled, while there was no assurance of success in future negotiations seeking settlement of deep-rooted Chinese-Japanese clashes of interest.

Japan Plans to Stay.

A Japanese army spokesman declared "We have no intention of shortening our lines." There were no indications Japan intends removing about 9,000 reinforcements, 50 airplanes and considerable war materials brought into Hopei Province since July 7.

The Japanese asserted no political or economic strings are attached to the agreement. They maintained it is a purely military settlement of a military local issue.

Well-informed Chinese, however, expressed fear of new threats to peace within the next few months.

They believed Tokyo will try to separate the Hopei-Chahar area politically and economically from Nanking government authority. Until Japan succeeds or Nanking shows by force that such ambitions are unattainable, they declare, the war danger will not pass.

Japan Forgets War.

Tokyo, June 23 (AP).—With confidence apparently widespread there will be no war with China, Japanese attention turned tonight to the opening of a two weeks' special session of Parliament and to home affairs.

Victim of Heart Attack at Summer Home in Maine.

Anning S. Prall, 68, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and for 12 years a member of Congress from New York, died yesterday of a heart attack at his summer home, Boothbay Harbor, Me.

Member of an old Dutch family, Mr. Prall resided at West New Brighton, on Staten Island, his birthplace. His ancestors had settled there in 1653. He entered public life to become a member of the board of taxes and assessments of New York City and thrice was elected president of the board of education.

In 1923 Prall was elected to the Sixty-eighth Congress from the Eleventh District of New York and was re-elected to each successive Congress, including the Seventy-third. He retired on January 3, 1935, and almost immediately was named to the Federal Communications post by President Roosevelt following the resignation of Hampson Gary.

Renominated to Post.

After taking the oath, his colleagues named him chairman of the broadcast division and later he came into the chairmanship. Last year he was reappointed chairman by the President.

Yesterday the FCC adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas the Federal Communications Commission has in the death of its chairman, Anning S. Prall, lost a wise and valuable public servant devoted to the interests of the people of the United States; an indefatigible worker and a courteous comrade; be it therefore Text of Resolution.

"Resolved, That the Federal Communications Commission hereby places on its permanent records this memorial:

"'In memory of Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Communications Commission from March 11, 1935, to the time of his death, July 23, 1937. He made valuable contributions to the work of this commission and to the art of communication in all its phases.'"

While here, Mr. Prall made his home at the Shoreham. He was a member of the Holland Society of New York; a governor of the Downtown Athletic Club; a member of the Foxhills Golf Club, the Columbia Country Club of Chevy Chase, Md., Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade, Transportation and other fraternal, social and civic organizations.

Surviving him are his wife and two sons, Anning Mortimer and Bryan William.

As a tribute to Mr. Prall, each of the 700 broadcasting stations of the United States is expected to remain silent for one minute at the opening of funeral services which will be held at Staten Island, N. Y., Monday, it was announced by the National Association of Broadcasters.

Samuel Riggs, Banker, to Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Samuel B. Riggs, 40, assistant treasurer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., who was found fatally shot early yesterday in a lawn chair in front of his home in Rockville, Md., will be held at his residence this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burial in Rockville Union Cemetery will follow.

A veteran of the World War, where he served in the front lines overseas, Riggs was a major in the Maryland National Guard and a member of one of Maryland's oldest and most prominent families.

According him full military honors, Company B, of Hagerstown, Md., Maryland National Guard, will come from training at Camp Albert C. Ritchie to participate in the rites. This was the company in which Riggs enlisted at the age of 16.

Active pallbearers will include Lieut. Col. Carey Jarman, Lieut. Col. Thomas McNicholas, Maj. E. Leslie Medford, Lieut. Col. Harry Wagner and Capt. William J. McWilliams. A bugler will blow taps.

In July, 1934, Riggs was named assistant treasurer of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., which he joined in 1920, after returning from France. Members of his family said yesterday he apparently had been in the best of health and had no financial or other worries.

Riggs' father, Capt. Samuel Riggs, served with distinction in the Spanish-American war and Philippine insurrection.

Surviving Riggs are his wife, Mrs. Ernestine Frances Riggs, and two daughters, Ernestine Frances Patterson and Caroline Frances, 4.

"Under his supervision," the resolution said, "the penal institutions at Occoquan and Lorton were regarded for many years as models of the open or unwalled type.

"Capt. Barnard possessed great common sense and practical good judgment in the handling of prisoners. He was always kindly, though firm and resolute.

"The Commissioners adopt this resolution as a mark of respect to his memory of sincere regard for the man and for the inestimable services he rendered."

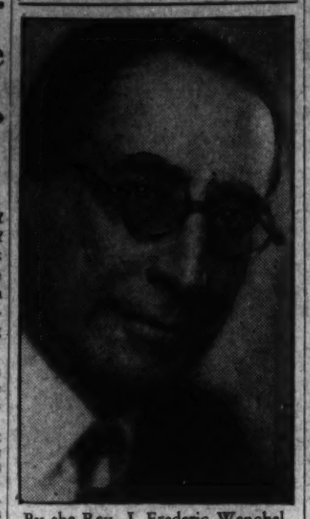
Today's Sermon



By the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel,
Pastor of Christ Lutheran Church.

The fight between Amalek and Israel has its modern application. Paul says, "these things were written afore time for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scripture might have hope." Hope more than anything else is what we need in our times. It can only be found in the patience and comfort of God. Men have sought it elsewhere and returned hopeless.

The church and the Christian is engaged in a bitter struggle with Amalek, sinister forces, subversive movements, and ungodly propaganda which would wipe out Christianity and destroy its spiritual, moral and social aims. The Christian church never can make peace or enter into compromise with modern Amalek. Materialism, secularism, humanism, fascism, communism, atheism are brothers in arms against Christianity, denying the spiritual nature and the immortal destiny of man, and the spiritual values of the universe as revealed and made effective in Christ and his redemption. They are using every weapon and force against the church. The essential conflict is not between these "isms" but the conflict between Christianity, its ideal, spirit, and hope, and these "isms." In this conflict there is neither any discharge nor any neutrality. Even those who are indifferently standing by are not only lending comfort but abbetting the enemy. Christ declares, "he that is not with me is against me." A false pacifism on the part of the church has allowed these enemies of man's spiritual, moral, and eternal welfare to gain great power in our modern world. These secularistic forces and movements are turning the world upside down, and creating bitter strife between man and man, and violent animosity between nation and nation.

The great leaders of the church in her battles have not only been men of vigorous action, but also men of fervent prayer. Moses, Elijah, Paul, Augustine, Luther testify to that. While Joshua and his army were fighting the Amalekites on the plains below, Moses was on the mountain side lifting up his hands with the rod of God interceding for victory. The hope of the church against the tremendous evil forces of our secularistic and neo-paganistic age is after all in the power of God. The church in her conflict must have the intercessory prayers of her people. "The battle is not to the strong alone." Victory eventually lies with God. In this struggle therefore the need is not only faithful and courageous action, but earnest and fervent intercession to God that He would give His church faithfulness to His revealed truth, wisdom in action, strength in battle.

The church's weakness which has given much advantage to the Amalekites has been her false pacifism and the lack of fervent intercession on the part of her people.

Senators Draft Conservative Court Reform

Committee Starts Work as Roosevelt Seeks to Heal Split.

passed on by three judges, of which a circuit judge shall be one.

McCarran will offer another amendment providing for reassignment of judges by the senior circuit judges of local circuits. He will also provide that a $10-a-day subsistence be paid judges called out of their district for bench service.

The Nevadan said he opposed creation in the Senate's "procedural" bill of any new judgeships. This, he said, should be provided in separate legislation, as recommendations, based on need, not age, are made by the Justice Department.

Bankruptcy Legislation.

Senator Borah favored legislation regulating procedure in bankruptcy and receivership cases, with special reference to attorneys' fees. McCarran said he believed this desirable, but thought it should be offered in a separate bill.

McCarran predicted the new bill will be ready for the Senate some time next week. Senate Majority Leader Barkley said no time has been set for its consideration by the Senate. He intimated it would be called up after the wage-hour and housing bills are disposed of next week.

Among the callers at the White House yesterday was President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, which early in the court fight went on record for the President's bill. Green expressed the federation's disappointment at recommitment of the court plan.

Dies, Roosevelt Talk.

Another caller was Representative Martin Dies, of Texas, who recently proposed a court bill amendment requiring a two-thirds Supreme Court majority in decisions involving constitutionality.

Dies declined to disclose results of the interview, but a movement gained headway in the House yesterday to attach the two-thirds proposal to the Senate's "procedural" bill. But Senate opponents yesterday stood firm on Administration assurances the Supreme Court would remain untouched in the forthcoming court measure.

In a high Administration quarter, the President meanwhile, was represented as feeling some of his original objectives have been achieved despite the Senate's rejection of his Supreme Court program. The President declined to comment on the Senate's action at his press conference yesterday, but in an official quarter it was said he thought the court bill fight had resulted at least in the Supreme Court altering its stand on vital points in New Deal legislation.

Cites Three Decisions.

The President was said to have taken note of the fact that the social security act, the Wagner labor act and the Washington minimum wage laws have been upheld since the court plan was proposed.

He feels, it was said, the social security decisions reversed a narrower conception of Federal spending power advanced in the adverse earlier AAA decisions. And he feels the Wagner decision reversed principles of the Guffey coal act invalidation, and provided a broader field for Congressional action in commerce.

The President also takes the view the Washington minimum wage decision reversed the earlier decision against the similar New York law, and advanced a new conception of the due process law as applied to the States.

The Administration official recalled the sentiment for judicial reform in the days before Theodore Roosevelt, and action demanded by the Progressive Party in 1912. He said the ensuing discussion showed its effect in judicial decisions for 15 or 20 years.

This spokesman took pointed occasion to say the elder La Follette and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, now the leading court plan opponent, demanded "drastic" court reform.

Court's "Legislation."

The President was said to regard court decisions during the Coolidge and Hoover Administrations as more legislative than judicial, and increasingly so to a point where his court message was made necessary.

He is understood to feel not only that the court plan played its part in liberalizing the more recent decisions, but in making the country court-conscious, and in giving it an understanding the Constitution was not intended to block social and economic reforms.

While not satisfied with the progress made, the spokesman said he thought the country is "getting somewhere" but has a long way to go.

To eliminate promotion rewards for loyal service, and thereby kill any hope for advantage from efficient work, it was held, would prove a serious handicap to the service.

Both the SEC local and the REA local, in their resolutions, declare there can be no objection to the effecting of "real economies," but declare the impaired morale and efficiency of under-staffed personnel amount to "false economy."

Removal of hope of pay increases in the face of "continually rising prices" and worry over lack of security can be expected to result, the REA complaint asserts, in greatly reduced efficiency and loss of incentive for better work.

Russians Will Protest 'Incursion' by Poles

Moscow, July 23 (AP).—The Russian government today instructed its minister to Warsaw, Poland, to protest an incursion by two Polish frontier guards into the Slavutsky district of Soviet Russia on July 5. Both were killed in a clash with Russian guards. A semiofficial announcement said the Poles opened fire after crossing the border and that "spy materials" were found on their bodies.

Court Defeat Costs Farley Prophet Role

he proclaimed the votes were in the bag, or words to that effect, and he repeated his prophecy at least a dozen times publicly afterward.

One Prophet Quits.

The last great American prophet to go sour—the Literary Digest—went out of business. Whether that is the fate which waits Jim Farley none knows—and he would not prophesy. Indeed, Jim Farley is not anxious just now to talk about the prophecy business. Instead, he is turning his attention to the dedication of postoffices. Without his regular seer and revelator's uniform, he left last night for Toledo to dedicate a postoffice.

The Nation first became conscious of the rising star of this prophet early in 1932 when he went out predicting that Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt would be the Democratic Presidential candidate that year. He was right, but one correct prediction no more makes a prophet than one swallow makes a summer.

Makes a Good Start.

Then he predicted that Gov. Roosevelt would carry all but five States in the November, 1932, election. He lost six, but that should not be held against Farley because a great many persons believe some nimble finger-work was done by the Republican counters in Pennsylvania that year.

This was impressive, but the cheering did not start until his prophecy in February, 1933, that the eighteenth amendment would be repealed within one year. Even such firey opponents of prohibition as Henry L. Mencken expected it would take three or four years. When repeal came in December, 1933, many a toast was drunk to the new prophet, "a Daniel come to judgment."

Early in 1934 Jim Farley predicted that the Democrats that year would increase their following in House and Senate. The political reporters jeered. But he was right—and people commenced following the Postmaster General around the streets in the hope that he might mutter a prediction for them.

In 1935 Jim predicted the renomination of President Roosevelt by acclamation. He was right but he modestly regarded that one as easy. In 1936, he started the year with a prediction that a "dirty campaign" was ahead. There may be some dispute about that, but a great many people think it was a "dirty campaign." Anyway, that is a sort of curbstone prophecy. He really got down to serious prophecy in May—a month before the Republican National Convention—when he proclaimed the Republicans would nominate for President "the Governor of a typical prairie State," meaning Gov. Alf Landon. His phraseology stirred up a hornet's nest of controversy, but it was a good prophecy.

His Greatest Prophecy.

Then he warmed up by predicting President Roosevelt would carry Pennsylvania. He followed this with a prediction that the President's electoral vote in 1936 would be greater than in 1932. Then he predicted a larger popular vote than in 1932. Once during the year he gave a curbstone opinion that President Roosevelt would carry Maine—but privately he confessed he did not mean it.

And then came his greatest prophecy. He solemnly announced that President Roosevelt would receive 523 electoral votes by carrying every State in the Union, except Maine and Vermont, and he added: "No kidding," which made it official. Had it not been for Farley's reputation none would have believed him. Even then only a few newspapermen who, as the President says, do not know dollars from cents, did. They bet and won. The President did not believe the Farley prediction. His guess was that he would receive 360 electoral votes. Even Democratic Statistical Wizard Emil Hurja, who some people believed was the source of Farley's predictions, guessed only 376 electoral votes.

It was then that Farley was hailed as equal to Moses. Had he retired as a prophet, he would have had a place in the history of crystal gazing. But like the proud angel Lucifer, who, having reached the pinnacle of glory, was not satisfied and fell with a resounding crash through heaven and earth, so Farley undertook to make another prophecy, with the same unfortunate result.

Sure of Court Victory.

Coming out of the White House on February 13, Farley predicted the Supreme Court bill would be passed. Turning to a reporter, who had sublime faith in the No. 1 prophet, Farley asked what he thought.

"I'm betting $5 it will pass," said the reporter.

"Double your bet," advised Farley.

In Dallas, Tex., on March 23, he declared the court plan "will be approved by Congress because the people of the United States are behind the President in this and every other plan he may propose."

On April 4 at Spring Valley, N. Y., while dedicating a postoffice, he said:

"We have let the Senate talk all they want to. Then the House will take up this matter, and there they will talk until they are tired. After they are all talked out, we will call the roll. You will find we have plenty of votes to put over the President's program.

Kept His Confidence.

On April 11 in an address to the New York Postoffice Holy Name Socnety, Farley, in discussing the court bill's chances, said:

"If I give a figure they may start counting. There will be more than enough. There are a lot of good fellows down in Washington who seem opposed to it now but they may wind up being for it. I don't want to embarrass anyone."

On April 13 at a Jefferson Day dinner in Philadelphia, he said:

"I assure you that, whenever the court question comes before the Senate to be voted on, the bill will have a substantial majority" . . .

Leaving the White House on May 14, Farley said "Why compromise? The bill is going through."

Votes Against Him.

As he came back from the Democratic harmony powwow on Jefferson Island on June 27, Farley was asked when he thought Congress would adjourn.

"After they have passed the court bill and the executive reorganization bill."

The Senate on Thursday voted, 70 to 20, to recommit the court bill to the Judiciary Committee with an understanding that all references to the Supreme Court will be taken from it and that it will be reduced to a procedural reform measure.

Thus are fulfilled the words in Deuteronomy: "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face."

U. S. Cancer Institute Here Awaits Roosevelt's Approval

A national cancer institute, to cost $750,000, and a $700,000 annual grant for purchase of radium and operation of cancer research activities were authorized yesterday in a bill passed by the House and sent to the President for his signature

The bill passed the Senate Thursday. It embodies provisions for co-ordination of cancer research under supervision of the Public Health Service and for loaning radium to States in which there is a scarcity.

A national advisory council, to be composed of six national medical leaders and Surgeon General Thomas as ex-officio chairman, will serve as the institute's co-ordinating agency.

Tests of purported "cancer cures" will be made in the institute laboratories and there cancer workers will be trained. New research will be fostered and research followships provided.

The institute will be established in or near the District and will be enabled to receive gifts from private individuals interested in stamping out the Nation's second greatest killer.

One million dollars of the total sum will be spent for radium, of which the Government will purchase 10 grams annually for five years. Thereafter, the grant for operation of the institute will be $500,000. The current market price of radium is $20,000 a gram.

nent in Chicago and were entertained in European society circles. Field was a neighbor of the Catons and often traveled with them in Europe.

The marriage of Mrs. Delia Spencer Caton, attractive, tall, dark-haired widow, to Field in London on September 5, 1905, was ended five months later by death.

Field was taken ill on their return to New York and died on January 17, 1906, after a short illness.

Simplicity and privacy marked the wedding in historic St. Margaret's Church, London. Field was 70 and a widower. Mrs. Caton, socially prominent, was 52.

Canon Hensley of Westminster Abbey officiated at the ceremony and only a few intimate friends were present. Among the guests were Whitelaw Reid, then United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James, and Mrs. Reid.

Inherited $100,000,000.

Mrs. Fild was known for her many philanthropies.

In 1907 she accepted the chairmanship of the civic health commission in Chicago to investigate milk being distributed in that city.

She organized 55,000 clubwomen in a drive against adultertaion of milk and won commendation from city officials.

She had lived during most of her recent years in Washington, spending her summers on the Massachusetts north shore.

Walking was one of her favorite pastimes. When she was 65 years old she said, "I walk 4 miles every day."

D. C. Society Leader.

Mrs. Field was active in society here just before the outbreak of the World War, during the war and for a few years thereafter.

She lived much of her time in her mansion at Sixteenth and Euclid streets northwest. In the early days her home was the scene of many gay parties.

It might well have been said that she saw the World War brewing in her drawing rooms and over her banquet tables, for hundreds of diplomats were her guests.

Beginning a decade ago Mrs. Field led a retiring life, and her little gatherings were informal and intimate.

British Warship Breaks Up Pirate Raid on Steamer

Hongkong (Saturday), July 24 (U.P.).—The British warship Cicala today broke up a pirate attack on the Chinese steamer Tinsang in the West River.

The warship came to the Tinsang's rescue just as the Pirates boarded the merchant ship.

Four pirates jumped overboard from the Cicala, but two were recaptured and one was killed.

Mann Act Fugitive Held in Arkansas

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F. B. I., announced yesterday that his agents had arrested Robert E. Lavine who, Hoover said, was under indictment at Baltimore, Md., on Mann Act charges. The arrest was made at a tourist camp near Little Rock, Ark.

The director said that Lavine, one of 11 defendants awaiting trial on white slavery charges made after a recent Federal investigation of vice conditions in Baltimore, was awaiting removal in the county jail at Little Rock.

Eleven other defendants have pleaded guilty in Baltimore to charges of violating or conspiring to violate the white slave traffic act.

D. C.'s Tax Bill Passed, Income Levy Included

While the House bill in one point restricted the tax to legal residents of the District, at another point it stated that the tax should be applicable to all income earned in the District regardless of whether the taxpayer resides in the District or in one of the States.

Other major provisions of the tax bill passed by the Senate are:

Strengthening of the intangible personal property tax, estimated to increase returns from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Motor vehicle weight tax, $1,500,000, all of which will go into a special highway fund.

A title setting up the highway fund and transferring the department of vehicles and traffic and the police traffic bureau, together with all receipts from motor vehicles save the personal property tax, to the fund.

Inheritance and estate tax, $800,000.

A $1 land value tax to be superimposed on the $1.50 realty levy, $4,800,000.

Authority for the Commissioners to obtain emergency loans from the United States Treasury.

A $20,000 authorization for the commissioners to have a broad tax survey made by experts.

District officials estimate that the income tax will have a gross return of $5,000,000. However, as credits will be allowed for payments of intangible personal property taxes, the net yield, they estimate, will be only $2,500,000. This is the same estimate of revenue expected from the sales tax.

Total About $9,000,000.

The total revenue for the general revenue fund, under the bill, would be between $8,600,000 and $9,100,000, depending upon the return from the strengthened intangible tax. The deficit in the general fund under the appropriations act is only $7,000,000.

Members of the Kennedy subcommittee suggested that the $1.70 general realty tax rate might be substituted for the $1 land levy and the budget thus be balanced. An increase of 20 cents in the realty tax would raise an additional $2,500,000, or about half the $1 land tax.

Kennedy suggested, in addition, that the gross receipts tax rejected by the Senate District Committee might be amended to erase inequities and the rate might be lowered "so nobody would be hurt."

The rate voted by the House is three-fifths of 1 per cent of all receipts of business houses, industries and professional persons. Estimates on its yield vary from $3,000,000 to $6,000,000.

Were the levy cut in half, Kennedy said, enough revenue might still be raised to offset the deficit when coupled with other noncontroversial taxes.

McCarran Opens Debate.

Senator McCarran opened debate on the tax bill shortly after noon yesterday with an appeal to the Senate to pass the measure despite its admitted faults and to allow House and Senate conferees to work out equitable provisions.

He pointed out that the District Committee had not had time to study the whole tax problem because of the lateness in receiving the House bill.

"This bill is far from ideal," he said. "It contains a sales tax, which I am opposed to. But it is designed to meet an emergency situation. I think the conferees may yet work out a bill which will be reasonable."

Not a ripple of protest was heard until the sales tax title was reached. Then Senator Borah arose.

"This District tax bill is an example of what may happen to the people of the whole United States," he said.

Noting the spread of the sales tax in recent years, he charged that it was promoted by persons who want to curtail income-tax payments in the higher brackets.

"We hear a lot of talk nowadays about Andrew W Mellon and his tax theories," he said, "but what we are doing is following right in the path he proposed while Secretary of the Treasury."

Mellon recommended cuts in the higher income tax rate and finally proposed a national sales tax, Senator Borah said.

"An emergency is always the excuse for imposing this form of tax on men who are unable to pay, Borah argued.

The spread of the sales tax, he said, is tending to "destroy the purchasing power of the whole nation." The "masses" of residents of the District are unable to pay a sales tax, he asserted.

Among others who joined in the demand for substitution of the income tax for the sales tax were Senators Capper (Republican), of Kansas; McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware.

The debate over the Tydings rider found only Senator King seriously opposed to the proviso which gives Federal approval to state laws authorizing manufacturers to make price-fixing contracts with retailers.

King attacked the proviso not only as "wholly improper" and "unfair to the District," because of its irrelevance to local taxes, but as nationally dangerous because, he charged, it nullifies the Sherman anti-trust act.

Barkley Drafts Plan of Action On Four Bills

slashed at the Treasury's request from a four-year program to a three-year program and from $1,000,000,000 to $700,000,000, with a $26,000,000 appropriation for the first year.

Leaders indicated that while wages-hours debate might consume several days, housing legislation probably could be passed in one day.

Farm Program Shelved.

But the Administration's farm program was apparently definitely shelved yesterday when the Senate Agriculture Committee, acting on the presumption that no general farm legislation could be passed this session, voted to hold regional hearings throughout the country on the new farm bill.

Senator ames P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, said the committee's action meant there was "virtually no prospect" for enactment of the legislation this session

Chairman Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, veteran opponent of most New Deal laws, is expected to name the sub-committee which will hold hearings in cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice-growing regions during the rest of the year if the Senate Audit and Control Committee approves the $10,000 appropriation request.

Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), of Alabama, took the floor to announce opposition to the "roving committee" if it would delay action until next year.

Smith answered that the committee had "agreed this morning without a single dissenting vote that the bill was so important it ought to be taken to the farmers themselves.

"It seems to me," he added, "that it's time we ought to do a little legislating for ourselves."

Big Farm Loss Seen.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, however, in a formal statement, said postponement of action of farm legislation would "cost American farmers millions of dollars."

"It is incredible," he said, "that there should be such disregard for repeated assurance of the leaders of this Administration and of the Democratic Party that adequate farm legislation would be passed."

"Is it possible that Democratic leaders in Congress would crucify the farmers on the cross of party dissension.?"

Barkley and Sen. Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, a behind-the-scenes New Deal strategist, left late last night for a two-day conference with the President on his yacht, the Potomac, with return set for late Sunday night.

The apparent reason for the long strategy session was to outline means of holding the Congress here long enough to pass major Administration measures.

Byrnes Is Mentioned.

The House will take up and probably pass without much argument, according to leaders, the first of the four Government reorganization bills on Monday. The first measure is practically noncontroversial, as it grants the President six $10,000-a-year assistants—"with a passion for anonymity."

This bill also is expected to pass the Senate without vigorous opposition.

But the rest of the Government reorganization plan appeared last night to be doomed to remain in the document-room filing cases. House chieftains said the second of the four House bills, a measure revamping the Comptroller General's office drastically, and transferring most of his powers to the Treasury, probably would pass the House, but that the outlook was bleak for the remaining two bills—reform of the civil service and reorganization of the executive agencies.

Senate action on any reorganization proposals other than that for the President's assistants is out of the question this session, many Senators agreed. Barkley said he did not know what the chances were for reorganization, but that the place of the late Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, as chairman of the Reorganization Committee, first must be filled. He mentioned Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, as the probable next chairman.

But weeks of hearings would be necessary, it was understood, before the single omnibus Robinson reorganization measure would be ready for consideration. Even its report to the floor appeared to be a dim possibility last night.

President Roosevelt, it was learned, feels definitely that it is in the lap of the legislative branch to decide what the country's future is to be. His position is that he has sent messages to Congress recommending a long series of objectives and that while it is the duty of the President to propose, it is inescapably the duty of Congress to dispose.

His attitude, it was said, is that one element in Congress says, "Let's go home and do nothing. Don't rock the boat. Everyone in the country is prosperous." He feels that this attitude, back in the Coolidge days of 1927-28, led to the crash and depression, through the chicken-in-every-pot, two-cars-in-every-garage theory.

He is understood to feel many specific things need to be done—that in the case of cotton, for instance, something must be done in the way of reasonable legislation. This year's tremendous crop, totaling probably 14,500,000 bales, if repeated next year, just when the Administration has whittled away the old cotton carry-over down to undisturbing proportions, might lead to disastrous 8-cent or even 6-cent cotton, he feels.

Speaker William B. Bankhead of the House told newsmen yesterday after a conference with Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, that "Unless we do something about the farm situation we'll be censured. There is no doubt that unless we enact control legislation prices are going to go down and we'll have another farm depression."

The farm legislative worry was intensified somewhat by the news that farmers may harvest the most valuable wheat crop this year since 1927, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Big Wheat Crop Forecast.

If present prospects materialize, the country not only will be the world's largest exporter of wheat in 1937-38 but "at the same time domestic prices are likely to to average higher than in 1936-37." United States production was set at 882,000,000 of bushels on July 1 indications.

At the White House, meanwhile, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, insisted the President urge enactment of a wages-hours bill at this session. He said that while the Federation had suggested some changes in the bill, because, in his view, the hourly rate was a "ceiling" instead of a "floor," any changes were "merely incidental."

Report Urges New Jefferson Memorial Site

House Committee Fears 'Eyesore' if Tidal Basin Is Selected.

of necessity remain forever an eyesore and an impediment to traffic or occasion the spending of money in sums at the present time unpredictable, but certainly very large."

Held up for several weeks at the request of Representative Boylan (Democrat), New York, who wished to tone down the original plan for the memorial before the Library Committee took action, the report does not criticize the John Russell Pope design or suggest other specific locations.

What it does is deprecate "prohibitive auxiliary expenditures," calling attention to the high cost of excavating at the Tidal Basin site; warn against the creation of a new traffic hazard; question the wisdom of following a formal plan, as the Boylan commission would do; and stress the pleasant, satisfactory atmosphere of the area in dispute as it exists today.

"The $3,000,000 authorized for the construction of a memorial to Thomas Jefferson is not too large an amount," says the report. "A reasonable addition for roadways, approaches, walks and landscaping may well be provided in due course, but the placing of the memorial in a location where proper approaches would entail an additional expense in all likelihood exceeding the cost of the memorial itself is, in the judgment of your committee, not rationally to be considered.

"Your committee insists, however, that the commission find another location, make its reports to Congress, with proper designs, and let the monument be one of the greatest of the great to be constructed."

For the Library Committee, which approved establishment of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, not to remind Congress that the memorial as now planned will cost an inestimably large sum "would be to fail this House in an unpardonable lapse of duty," the report states.

ganization to the constantly changing economic factors—such would be the object of the institution's studies.

"If we wish to avert war and bring the nations back to a more peaceful frame of mind, we must have the courage to tackle the economic question in its entirety; distribution of raw materials—the distribution of means of exchange, international distribution of labor—equilibrium between the agricultural and industrial nations. . . .

Putting Congress To The Test.

There is more than a little irony in the fact that President Roosevelt vetoed a joint resolution in which Congress sought to encroach upon the function of the courts on the same day that the Senate buried the Supreme Court bill. Apparently Congress let this peculiar measure slip through without even recognizing its impropriety. At any rate, the President has done well to strike out vigorously at the practice of "reversing the decision of the court by legislative action."

The Court of Claims had decided that William K. Richardson was not entitled to recover $10,000,000 from the Government. After extensive hearings it had concluded that the Government had not infringed Richardson's patent relating to artillery projectiles. For Congress to interfere with the decision in such a technical case would be inexcusable, especially at a time when the Senate has come to the fore as a defender of judicial independence.

According to the President's veto message, the resolution accepted by both houses of Congress "would practically declare the prior decision of the court erroneous." It would order a rehearing of the case, with a strong hint that the petitioner should be allowed a sop of $300,000. Enactment of such a measure would make a mockery of judicial procedure.

The President's veto comes, therefore, at a timely moment. It will put to a severe test those legislators who voted for this bill and who more recently participated in the fight against enlargement of the Supreme Court. For if they believe that the courts should function without legislative coercion the President's veto must be upheld.

Memorial For Capt. Barnard.

One of the Capital's best known servants is dead. Capt. Morris Macy Barnard, superintendent of District penal institutions for 21 years until his resignation last April, won a national reputation for his forward-looking theories and practices in penology here. At Lorton he strove to develop a reformatory instead of a penitentiary. Originally built without walls, it housed nonetheless convicts ranging from petty offenders to life-termers. To him they were all "unfortunates" and it was his constant aim to rehabilitate them for life in a world in which they had lost their way.

Further evidence of his deep sympathy for those caught in the toils of crime was to be seen in his continual plea for a better probation system for young first offenders in Washington. He also was an ardent supporter of the plan to establish a hospital for inebriates.

These humanitarian traits do not indicate, however, that Capt. Barnard was sentimental about his charges. His courageous handling of a riot which broke out at Lorton in 1933 proved the contrary. The riot, incidentally, was not due to defects in his administration, but rather to inadequacies in the institution beyond his power to correct. He was denied sufficient funds to enlarge Lorton to a size demanded by the city's rapid expansion.

Lorton is still too small and poorly equipped. A fit memorial to Capt. Barnard would be quick completion of the plans to which he gave so large a measure of his energy.

An Olive Branch From Hitler?

The arrival in Germany of a new Soviet ambassador has occasioned a display of amenities conspicuously absent in the relations of the two countries during recent years.

There appears to be a considerable measure of disagreement as to the degree of friendliness displayed by Hitler to Yurenev when the latter presented his credentials to the Fuehrer at Berchtesgaden Wednesday. Some correspondents assert that the exchange of greetings was rather obviously lacking in cordiality. Others, however, insist that Hitler went out of his way to make Yurenev at home, inviting the latter to breakfast and lunch and personally showing him about the chalet. But still others emphasize the barbed reference to "non-intervention" made by the Nazi dictator in his reply.

In any case, it is a subject of considerable interest in Europe that the Soviet ambassador's expression of hope for better relations between Russia and Germany was echoed by the Fuehrer. Such peaceful language happens to be the common coin of diplomacy and is always subject to considerable discount in lands where the inflation of the militarist spirit is one of the principal pursuits of the government. Nevertheless, in Hitler's case, it is significant that he even went through the formality of admitting the need of improved relations with the Soviet Union.

At Nuremberg and since that occasion the Nazi leaders have used language unparalleled in its abuse of Russia and the men governing it. Such vituperativeness gave substance to the widespread belief that one of the principal aims of the Third Reich's foreign policy was diplomatic isolation of the U. S. S. R. to be followed by a partitioning of that country. If now Germany is prepared to pursue a friendlier course toward Russia all Europe would breathe easier, even if the belief entertained by some that the brown and red dictatorships may soon return to their former status of quasi-allies proves to be without substance.

The possibility of a German-Russian alliance at present is far-fetched. Yet any real improvement in Soviet-German relations would advance the cause of peace.

Common Sense On D. C. Taxes.

Washington owes a hearty vote of thanks to the Senate for the deliberate and sensible manner in which it handled the local tax problem yesterday. Without a trace of prejudice or hysteria, the Senate threw out the proposed sales tax and substituted the income tax bill which had aroused such vociferous objections in the House. Under this arrangement Washingtonians will still have to dig down into their pockets for a considerable sum of money, but the burden will be far more equitably distributed.

In taking this obviously reasonable course, the Senate delivered a left-handed rebuke to its District Committee, which appears to have favored the income tax, but failed to recommend it because of House opposition. An emotional revolt in the House certainly should not deter the Senate from passing a tax bill adjusted to the needs of the District. Indeed, Congress consists of two legislative chambers chiefly for the reason that one may correct the blunders of the other.

Fortunately the tax issue had been thoroughly explored and debated before it reached the floor of the Senate. No group had been able to find any satisfactory source of revenue to take the place of the income tax. Serious objection had been raised to the proposed business privilege tax. And the levy on retail sales advocated by the Senate District Committee was not made palatable by the attempt to tag it as a "luxury sales tax." Facing the situation realistically, the Senate found that the income tax was the only equitable measure giving promise of raising the needed revenue.

Credit for thus bringing order out of the chaotic tax situation goes largely to Senators La Follette and Borah. But the absence of any objection to the change clearly indicates the reasonable attitude of the entire Senate.

Some other sections of the bill are much less satisfactory. The same logic which eliminated the sales tax should have defeated the outrageous special tax on land. That drastic imposition on home owners will not be needed to supplement the proposed income tax. In conference it should be stricken out in favor of a slight increase in the general real estate levy, if that is necessary.

As the Senate bill stands, it would probably raise $2,000,000 more than is essential to balance the District's budget. That fact will give the conference committee sufficient leeway to discard objectionable features in both bills. If that group will accept the income tax as the basis of its agreement, it should be able to work out a fully satisfactory revenue program.

It is a pity that this task must be complicated by the Tydings rider, arbitrarily attached to the local tax bill by the Senate committee and approved on the floor. That measure has not the slightest relation to District taxes or any other local problem. If for no other reason than to encourage sound legislative practices, the conference committee should discard it.

Where The Fault Lies.

Senator Nye's charge that the National Labor Relations Board is a partisan body which has disqualified itself as a "referee" between management and workers completely ignores the real cause of dissatisfaction. The trouble is due to the law itself under which the NLRB was created. That body is not supposed to be an impartial mediator between employer and employe, but an agency to see that labor is protected against certain unfair employer practices and permitted to bargain collectively through representatives of its own choosing.

In view of this fact, the board's alleged partisanship and its failure to "promote and restore economic harmony" are easy to explain. The only way to correct what Senator Nye regards as its bias is to revise the Wagner act, making the NLRB as accessible to employers as to employes and requiring workers as well as those who hire them to abstain from unfair practices.

On the whole, in view of its handicaps, the NLRB appears to have done about as good a job as was possible in settling the issues brought to it for determination. Senator Nye ought, therefore, to turn his attention to the shortcomings of the one-sided Wagner act, passed by Congress over the warnings and protests of thoughtful critics. The rights and privileges conferred upon organized labor by that act entail corresponding responsibilities and failure to recognize that fact has inevitably led to trouble.

When proposing various amendments to the Wagner act designed to broaden its scope, Senator Vandenberg said: "There are four parties to a collective bargaining dispute under the Wagner act: the majority employes, the minority employes, the employer and the public. The Wagner act ably defends the first. It seems to me that it must now acknowledge the rights of the other three." Until it does so, it will clearly be impossible for the NLRB to perform the duties of a completely detached "referee" in industrial disputes.

An Irresponsible Action.

By overriding the President's veto of the bill extending emergency low interest rates on Federal Land Bank loans the Senate has committed the Federal Government to additional outlays not provided for in the budget. The cost of this interest subsidy during the next two years is officially estimated at $53,000,000. That is a considerable sum to give away for the purpose of subsidizing a small privileged group of farmer-borrowers.

However, the refusal of both the House and Senate to heed Presidential warnings against additional drafts upon the Treasury in the present unbalanced state of the budget is much more perturbing than the actual cost of the subsidy.

The debate in the Senate showed how easy it is for those who pay lip service to economy and periodically cry out for balanced budgets to find excuses for spending just a little more. Examination of the list of 71 Senators voting to override the veto is most disillusioning. There are to be found that doughty leader of the economy forces, Senator Byrd, of Virginia, and also the senior Senator from Virginia, Carter Glass. On previous occasions, Senator Glass explained, efforts at economy have been successfully resisted. That being the case, he was not willing to begin by economizing at the expense of the farmer. That is, indeed, a lame excuse for failing to support the President when he vetoes an unsound spending measure.

Senator Glass is undoubtedly aware of the fact that extension of low rates on loans to farmers will increase the pressure for similar reductions in the rates charged by other Federal lending agencies, notably the HOLC. Since he has, as he says, "consistently opposed the entrance of the Federal Government into the business affairs of the country," it is utterly inconsistent for him to uphold a measure that tends to interfere with the extension of private financing on a sound basis.

Some Senators contend that it was illogical for the President to approve a bill providing loans at low rates of interest to finance the purchase of farms by tenants while opposing reduced rates enabling farmer-owners to keep their land. Even if the cases were parallel, there would be no justification for piling expenditures atop of expenditures when the budget is unbalanced. But as a matter of fact, the position of the submerged tenant is not comparable to that of a farmer who owns his land and in the great majority of cases is able to pay going rates of interest on his loans.

From the character of the debate it was painfully evident that many Senators were eager to find excuses for supporting an outlay no longer justified by emergency conditions. If this irresponsible attitude is a foretaste of what is to come, there is not much hope of putting a curb upon the spending mania, which accounts for failure to balance the budget.

Chicago's "Massacre" Exposed.

The fair tone of the report by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee on the Memorial Day clash between police and steel strikers at South Chicago is the best argument for the extra appropriation of $50,000 sought by its chairman. If it can maintain such balance in all its inquiries, the committee will merit the continued support and confidence of the Senate.

A second reason for publishing the report at this time presumably was a desire on the part of the committee to answer the Chicago coroner's jury which earlier in the week returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide" in the cases of the ten men slain during the fray. Except perhaps in Chicago, where long years of corrupt government may have dulled popular appreciation of honesty and justice, the verdict will be catalogued as absurd. The boast that the jury was composed of "six unemployed American Legion members" only adds to the reasons for discounting its conclusion. That organization's long record of antipathy for left-wing activities should have disqualified any of its members from serving on the jury.

The testimony of both eyewitnesses and principals in the unfortunate affair, as given in Chicago, differed little in substance from that heard before the Senate committee in Washington, according to newspaper reports. Yet few here could reach any conclusion except that announced by the committee: "We think it plain that the force employed by the police was far in excess of that which the occasion required." Indeed, this is gross understatement of the views of many.

All, however, must approve the constructive suggestion appended to the committee report by Senator Elbert D. Thomas. Riot duty, he points out, is a difficult task even for a well-disciplined soldier. Accordingly, he urges that only those trained in the work be given assignments in strike areas. This advice should be tacked over the desk of every police chief in the country.

In ruling that the wearing of shorts on the streets is permissible, a New York court points out that people have the right, within limitations, to make fools of themselves. It's a privilege that's greatly abused.

On Segregation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I beg to say that the letter of J. O. Knott in The Post of July 20, seems to me to present fairly and intelligently a very important distinction in the point of view between segregation and what he happily calls "gravitation." The idea of gravitation as simply a natural segregation is very clearly set forth in contrast to any plan of forceful or legislative segregation.

In this matter of race relations, is it not a fundamental need that any race, while upholding its own peculiar character and while standing for its own rights, should think fairly and charitably of the character and rights of all other races? However much there may be of natural segregation or gravitation, it is certain that injudious race problems would not appear if each race would try to remember that each is a part of a wider racial category, namely, the human race.

The progress to this must come, as the writer of the letter says, by the spread of a more liberal edueation and by the growth of a more devoted religious consciousness. This means a long process and an almost superhuman patience, but still it would seem to be the only sure and permanent way.

It seems a pity that England felt driven by the pressure of the troublesome land question to adopt her recent policy of division in Palestine. However, it is to be hoped that she will continue to carry on her plans of educational development.

During a visit ten years ago I was told by the able commissioner of education, working under the British Mandate, that in recent years nearly 300 school houses have been built.

Japan's Objectives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The objectives of Japan are to control China and the entire Far East in her own interests and to the commercial exclusion of the Occidental powers. If and when these objectives are achieved it is her purpose and, she is conceited enough to believe she is equal to the task, to dictate to the Occidental powers world policies. England and the United States are the special objects of her hatred, because she believes they stand in the way of her ambitions.

It is to the common interest of the United States, Great Britain, France, the Netherlands and Russia to co-operate in encouraging China to resist Japan, and to furnish her with all the necessary financial and material assistance to that end.

Protection Of Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter printed in The Post of July 22 "A Reader" expresses the opinion that children of our country are lacking in knowledge of self-protection; that it is the duty of the Board of Education, with the co-operation of parents, to instill in their minds such protection that will enable them to avoid any horrible attacks.

In my opinion, the responsibility for safeguarding their health and welfare goes far beyond the realms of home and school. Parents can warn children against the dangers when they are old enough to realize right from wrong. As part of their character development I have taught my babies to have confidence in themselves, bringing out self-reliance, and have tried to build up in them a confidence in all their relationships. It has been necessary for me, as a working mother, to make provisions for their welfare by affording them the best possible care and environment. However, a child not yet old enough to sense danger is subjected to fiendish brutality and criminal depravity while innocently at play in broad daylight, within sight of a continued flow of passing motorists and neighbors.

God placed two angel sentries in a park opposite where my little 3-year-old girl played with her doll and carriage. Suspecting the actions of a passing motorist who tried to tempt the child into his car, parked his auto a distance from the block and took her into the hallway, they came upon this beast and thwarted completion of a most dastardly crime. Not soon enough, however, to have avoided the attack which necessitated medical care and a great deal of mental anguish in the fears attached to the dangers to which the child was subjected. Not soon enough, for the effect on the child was a horrible experience, indelibly impressed on her infant mind.

Murder was not committed, but this moral pervert was dealt leniency by the law because he had not accomplished his intent; because his racketeering friends bamboozled the courts and put up thousands of dollars in bond for his release, in spite of a previous record for similar acts of perversion and in spite of evidentiary testimony as given and accepted by this little victim on the insistence of the mother. After his term of six months, what then? Free to continue in his path of crime and, possibly, murder.

Thousands of children are fiendishly attacked and murdered in this country each year. Millions of dollars must be spent in capturing or attempting to find the criminals. Most of them escape, and those who are taken into custody are so often set free, their freedom bought by their gangster and racketeer friends. A parent can do only part of the big job—and it is up to this country to get rid of those who are captured so that they no longer will infest our neighborhoods and molest our children. Segregate and punish them and keep them from society. Stop injustice in the courts and bring back to citizens the feeling of protection and confidence in the police and law.

Hancock Health.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your paper of July 19 I read an article dated Hancock, Md., regarding typhoid fever, which seems to have been carried by some persons or person.

I think that if our State Board of Health or Dr. W. Ross Cameron would investigate the condition of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal bed, also, the mouth of the Tonoloway Creek, he, or they, would find the cause for any kind of disease, not only typhoid fever. The existing condition is disgraceful, and it certainly seems that some action should be taken in order to correct the condition that exists in both the canal and the creek.

I am sure that a great deal of the cause for typhoid fever would be eliminated in and around Hancock if this public matter was given the proper attention, but so far we have just complained without results.

"Victory For The President After All."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that we have really heard the last of the court bill for some time. Would not the following be a fair analysis of the situation which led to its being shelved?

The Administration had just enough votes to push the bill through the Senate, counting on the adherence of those Senators who, for political reasons, would be unwilling to go on record against it if a vote were forced. But an opportunity to defeat it under cover was suddenly provided by the necessity of choosing a new floor leader. It was well understood on the Hill that if Barkley were elected the bill would be pushed to a vote, if Harrison, it would be shelved. And the doubtful Senators could defeat Barkley. They were free to vote against him because: (1) their constituents would not realize that a vote against Barkley was a vote against the bill, and (2) because in any case the voting for the floor leader was secret and no one outside the senatorial Democratic Party need ever know how they voted.

The President, therefore, decided to make a trade. He could have Barkley or the bill, and he chose Barkley. He let it be known that the bill would be withdrawn, and the doubtful Senators, in return, elected his candidate. Even those of us who have been firm believers in the bill must agree that he chose wisely. With Harrison as floor leader, the whole of the remainder of the New Deal would have been in jeopardy, while the agitation for the bill had now largely served its purpose. It had led the judges to scrutinize their past views in the light of their social responsibilities; having done so they proceeded to reverse themselves on important points, and it may be expected that for some time at least, they will maintain a semi-liberal position.

Besides, the President is now free to appoint a genuine liberal to fill Justice Van Devanter's place. It is not generally realized how Robinson's death has changed the situation. While he lived, his great claims upon the President made it almost impossible not to appoint him to the court. But it is clear that he could not have been depended upon to give consistent support to Brandeis and Cardozo. In a critical case he would have been a weak link. There would have been required a second judge to counterbalance him, but this would only have preserved the status quo on the bench. A third judge, then, was clearly necessary, so long as Robinson was slated for the post, to assure the safe majority which could have been obtained by the appointment of a single liberal instead of Robinson.

Since Robinson's death the President has been in a position to make that appointment. The bill, then, had become simply a matter of prestige. It was still desirable to pass it, but if something could be gained by its abandonment it would have been pointless to remain intransigent. Something was to be gained—the election of Senator Barkley as leader of the party in the Senate—and the President, who is an astute politician, did not miss the opportunity to gain it. Those who represent the shelving of the court reform bill as a defeat for him quite overlook (or intentionally ignore) this aspect of the situation. It turns out to have been a victory for the President after all.

What to Do?

BACK about 1870, Uncle Sam, notwithstanding the old saying to the contrary, decided to do something about the weather. His first move in this direction was to appoint this Nation's first official weather forecaster.

The man whom Uncle Sam thus put on the spot was Gen. Albert J. Myer, who had won distinction as the inventor of a system of military signaling that was based on his observations of methods practiced by the Indians in the West, and who had also served as our first chief signal officer.

Gen. Myer admitted that he did not know much about the weather. Almost immediately he learned that he was 100 per cent correct; and that the weather could spring more surprises in a single afternoon than a tribe of Indians could during a whole campaign.

He had just a few assistants and none of the marvelous instruments in use today. With the true caution of the scientist he invariably began his forecasts with "Probably"—so invariably in fact, that he became known as "Old Probabilities," or, more familiarly still, as "Old Probs." Usually his predictions covered a great deal of territory, both actually and figuratively. "Probably rain, turning to sleet and snow, followed by"—rubber boots, sore throat, pneumonia, death. Occasionally, in midsummer, the scope of the forecasts narrowed down a bit, and references to possible blizzards and glaciers were daringly omitted.

In these days, Gen. Myer's forecasts would certainly earn him a low I. Q., but in his time the American people read them and laughed or cussed, depending upon their dispositions and temperaments—and perhaps the state of the weather at the moment.

Handicaps considered, Gen. Myer and his associates did a wonderfully good job. Nevertheless, so far as the public was concerned, the general's identity was totally lost. He was merely "Old Probs" to the man on the street. But Uncle Sam did not forget him. That cozy little Army post, Fort Myer, which looks down upon the National Capital from a nearby Virginia hilltop, was named for him.

Since Gen. Myer's time a number of distinguished men have filled the position he was the first to hold. Lacking the divine contact that prompted Noah to prepare for the flood and Elijah to predict rain, these modern prophets have surrounded themselves with a battery of remarkable scientific devices and tons of data gathered through the years. Yet, not infrequently, they are left as helpless and bewildered by Nature's pranks as Gen. Myer must have been.

Nature, the meteorologists will tell you, with grim smiles and furrowed brows, knows more tricks than Thurston ever dreamed of, and can play each and every one with infinite variations. However, despite the difficulties they face daily, and the public ridicule to which they are sometimes subjected, the forecasters stick everlastingly to the job.

Every day, shortly after sunrise their work begins. At that early hour messages fairly begin to pour into Weather Bureau headquarters here. They come from stations in the United States, Canada, Alaska, Europe, the West Indies, from ships at sea and from airplanes everywhere. Altogether, 7,000 data-collecting agencies scattered over a vast area make their contributions. And barometers, anemometers, wind-drift indicators, rain gauges, automatic recorders, meteorographs, kites, captive balloons, even radio robots, play their silent but important roles.

Every day, in our large cities, business firms of all kinds send their messenger boys to the various weather bureaus for the mimeographed forecast sheets, 90,000 of which are mailed daily free of charge to subscribers, who accept the service eagerly and never forget to grumble when a prediction proves misleading.

Even with their formidable array of helpers and the best of intentions, our weather men frequently find themselves hanging, figuratively, on the ropes after a furious bout with Nature. Yet, their predictions are becoming more accurate. Since the forecasters are now able to boast a batting average of about .850, it is obvious that their predictions are not nearly so off-color as some scoffers would have us believe.

One of the main objectives of the scientists now is to learn farther in advance just what sort of weather is in store. Suppose, for example, a drought could be foretold a year beforehand, and measures could be taken to prevent Nature from stirring up things in America's great "dust bowl!"

With ambitious objectives always in mind, scientists are delving deep into such abstruse problems as the influence of the planets, air masses, weather cycles, ocean temperatures and other phenomena that may be involved in the solution.

But for the present Nature has them baffled. A capricious old girl, full of unpredictable whims, she keeps these learned men humble, and seems frequently to take delight in leaving them up in the air—as high as the kites they send up to nose about to see what's what.

LOUIS E. REICHARD.

Tom McCarthy

KADOKA, S. DAK., July 21.—They come out on their porches to watch the rain in those South Dakota towns west of Mitchell. In Fresno, Draper, Murdo and Kadoka, rain is a rare and decisive event. This year it came just 10 days too late to save the first real grain crop in years and, when they came out to watch, it was with the knowledge of a crop yield 50 per cent below normal expectancy. Day after day an unrelenting sun had cruelly baked that converted grazing land, which many claim should never have seen a plow.

TOM McCARTHY.

As you watch the thick swirl of dust trailing a tractor across a field, in the blazing heat of a Dakota sun, you wonder at the wisdom of plowing such ground. You may wonder about it, but the farmers of that region don't. They set their lips tightly and look ahead to next year's crop. They are used to disappointment. They have faith in their barren fields. They cannot conceive that the land to which they have devoted their lives should never have been plowed.

They're hanging on, in those South Dakota towns, and waiting for the land to come back. They feel that it can't go on forever . . . this seemingly endless cycle of heat, drought and grasshoppers. This year they felt everything was going to be all right. Their land was coming back. There was sufficient rain. Crops looked good in June.

* * * *

THEN CAME the heat, unrelenting, undesisting, sucking the life from their crops even as they stood helplessly by and watched. Rain came again in mid-July, and it did save a sorry kind of crop. But, after years of waiting, the stunted grain is small compensation.

They know what hardship is in that land west of the James River to the Black Hills, and they know disappointment. They haven't had a real crop since 1932, and that year, when they had a bumper crop, wheat sold for 18 cents a bushel. Many of the farmers burned it for fuel.

Albert Herman is one of the large farmers in Draper. In 1935 he planted 500 acres with spring wheat and he didn't harvest a kernel. In 1936 he planted the same 500 acres with fall wheat and later with 500 acres of corn. He didn't harvest a kernel of wheat nor an ear of corn. A man can't stay in business long that way. Albert Herman was looking pretty happy the last days of June this year. Crops looked good. Then came that heat, unbroken by cooling rains, and he watched his crop day by day lessen in value. He'll get something this year . . . as will all the farmers of that region . . . but it will be small return for those fruitless years of back-breaking toil.

As the farmers this year watched their hopes fading in the savage sun of mid-July, they turned back to other years and strange stories of hardship were called upon to make this year's disappointment seem less bitter.

They will tell you of Hugo Stark, whose fields burned to sterile, desolate wastes under the sun of 1934. The only green thing which survived the pitiless heat was a weed, the Russian thistle, at one time thought to be useless. He harvested his crop of weeds and, such was the need of the cattle raisers with their starving cattle, that he was able to trade his harvest of weeds for a truck.

The clergymen of the region can tell you stories of the poverty wrought by the sun. Many of them had to take relief jobs, teaching in adult education projects, in order to remain and minister to the spiritual wants of their impoverished parishioners.

Father Arthur O'Brien, now stationed at Murdo, will tell you how his church burned down last year and his parishioners donated five days' work and 10 acres of grain to its rebuilding. From the 165 acres, seeded for this purpose, not a kernel of grain was harvested.

Those days are of the recent past, but still the farmers of that waterless land carry on, buoyed up by hope and the more tangible assistance of Government seed loans and relief work.

"This land will come back," they'll tell you, even while you gaze on fields of stunted grain. And they explain that the rain came too late this year for a real crop.

GEN. CUSTER passed through this region in 1872 and 1873, a period in which it was claimed there was an excessive rainfall. His descriptions, and his faith in this land, were premised on that trip. It was in 1875 that one Gen. Hazen published his impressions of the same region under the title of "These Barren Lands."

While the Army men of that early day divided on the ability of this land to sustain human life, the present argument revolves around the usefulness of the region as farming country. That it is good cattle country, under the conditions normal to the region, is not subject to argument, but the transition to the exclusive business of cattle raising cannot be effectively accomplished by the mass of these farmers with their relatively small holdings.

At present, depending on both their cattle and their ineffective agriculture, they struggle along from year to year, undergoing hardship and poverty. The prime and fundamental suggestion which has been put forward by observers is that the fields be allowed to return to grass, farming be abandoned and the land given over to cattle raising.

Naturally enough, farmers surveying a past of hardship struggle, founded upon the expectation of return, can see little good in a course of action which has for its basis the conviction that their work has been entirely in vain. It is difficult to admit that the work you have been pursuing for 20 years was more destructive than beneficial. It is difficult to admit that the devotion of a lifetime has been lavished upon an unworthy object.

There is also, in these farmers, a fear of the "big man." They see in all movements which would take them from the land which has supported them so meagerly a plot on the part of the "big" cattle raiser, who, with his herds, would succeed.

* * * *

IN KADOKA I talked with a man who came into that country back in the eighties. He ended his active days as a merchant and sold out with a profit. I don't know what his full name is, but he's known as "Old Man" Doty. He's been in that country for 53 years.

His answers to my questions reflected the never-ending hope of those settlers of South Dakota, and their fear of the "big" man.

"Sure we've had hard times," he told me, "but this land will come back. I don't know as we could have got along without some help from the Government, but there was some that wasn't needed. I don't know anybody who is starving.

"Great cattle country we've got here, and if we could get some rain we could have a crop. Do I think the farmers should give up plowing this land? I should say not! What we've got to have is a little farming, and a little cattle raising. We need a little of both. The people have had hard times, but it'll come back. It always has.

"What do I think of the idea of moving out the farmers and turning this country over to cattle? Why, that's just a plot to give this land to the 'big man.' You know and I know that you can't make a living just raising a few cattle. You've got to have a lot of them and a big range, if you're to make money. We've got the right way now, with some farming and some cattle raising. That's the only way the little man can make out here. Yes, I know we haven't had any real crops, and the farmer hasn't been doing so well, but this land will come back.

"This is great country," he said, looking down the dusty main street of Kadoka. "Even in the warm weather you can go to bed at 8 o'clock at night, and you need a blanket.

Cicero Fulpan Explains Congress

Congressman Assists Magnolia Thistle On Paper.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Petunia.
June 23, 1937.

Congresman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

The Petunia Literary and Betterment Society has decided to devote the next six months to a complete study of our Government and I have been selected to explain Congress at its next monthly meeting.

I have been trying to find something worth while to say about Congress, but there is nothing satisfactory about it here. I asked my good friend Mr. Slim Slack to help me but he said he couldn't explain it. He said he believed nobody could explain Congress now and so I am writing to you.

I understand that you carry great weight in Washington and are familiar with its inner workings. You might begin by explaining the main difference between a Senator and a Congressman.

Thanking you for whatever information you feel you can give me on this subject, I am

Your faithful servant,
(Mrs.) MAGNOLIA THISTLE.

P. S.—Mr. Slack says the Senate is the place where every Congressman hopes to go before he dies. Why?

Washington, D. C.
June 25, 1937.

Mrs. Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Thistle:

The Congressman is tied up in committee today but I am glad to answer your inquiry. You want to know the principal difference between a Senator and a Congressman. The greatest difference is that the Senators talk more and worry less.

In the Senate a member can talk until he gets tired, and usually does, but in the House a member is lucky if he gets to speak five minutes and has to put the remainder of what he wanted to say in the Extension of Remarks. And a Senator has to worry only once every six years, while a Congresmasn has to worry every other year. The Senators also enjoy certain prerogatives a Congressman does not have.

I am glad to inform you that the Congressman carries great weight wherever he is.

Assuring you that it has been a pleasure to render you this service, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—I guess they think a place where there is no gag rule must be Utopia.

Petunia,
June 28, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I think I understand the chief difference between a Senator and a Congressman now, which is that the Congressman talks less because he isn't allowed to talk more. But I would like to know more about the prerogatives of a Senator.

I have been reading some Congressional Records you sent Mrs. Fannie Sitz, but I didn't see where you ever extended any remarks.

Please explain to me just what Congress does and why.

Your faithful servant,
(Mrs.) MAGNOLIA THISTLE.

P. S. Why did they tie you up in committee? Is that the way they rope in a Congressman?

Washington, D. C.,
June 30, 1937.

Mrs Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Thistle:

I regret that the Congressman is in conference with other important leaders, but I am glad to give you the information you desire in his absence.

The prerogatives which the Senators have are such things as private elevators, underground subway car, the right to block a Congressman's choice for postmaster and free hair cuts. The Congressman has often said that he didn't mind any of the prerogatives except the subway car and the hair cuts. It's quite a distance to walk from his office to the House when the bell rings notifying him that a vote will be taken on some bill. Twice he has been in such a hurry to get his vote on record that he has had to take a mild stimulant after the walk, and he is always needing a hair cut.

The Congressman has made it a rule never to insert anything in the appendix of the Congressional Record. He says no one ever reads it but your opponent and he always misconstrues it. He says remarks put in the Record are like love letters, they are likely to embarrass you long years after you have forgotten all about the subject.

Whenever you desire any other information, please do not hesitate to call on this office.

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S. The Congressman cannot be roped in. He stated just the other day that he wears no man's collar.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Mrs. Fannie Sitz about the love letters embarrassing you and she was quite excited over it. As you know she is now the poet laureate of the Petunia Literary and Betterment Society and is very romantic. Since I told her about you she has been guessing who she is, but she said she couldn't imagine who she could be.

If this is not worrying you too much I would appreciate your also explaining Congress as soon as possible.

Your faithful servant,
(Mrs.) MAGNOLIA THISTLE.

P. S. I noticed your secretary says you will not wear a man's collar. I think that's sensible as hot as the weather's been.

LETTER OF SECRETARY MISCONSTRUED RE LOVE LETTERS WRITING YOU IMMEDIATELY

Washington, D. C.
July 6, 1937.

Mrs. Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Thistle:

I am profoundly disturbed over your recent letter and I hasten to inform you that my able secretary's letter has been unfortunately misconstrued. Please let me assure you that I have not been embarrassed by any love letters. The illustration was one suggested by the unfortunate experiences of less cautious friends. I sincerely trust that you will convey this information to my good friend, Mrs. Sitz.

With my very best regards, I am
Yours very sincerely,

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I showed your letter to Mrs. Sitz and she was delighted to learn that your love letters did not embarass you, but is sorry that they embarrassed your friends. She said she has been thinking what wonderful love letters a man of your ability must have written and she has decided to compose a romantic ode about love letters with you as the main character.

Please let me know more about Congress.

WILLA DOOLITTLE
SECRETARY.

Washington, D. C.
July 10, 1937.

Mrs. Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Thistle:

In the Congressman's absence I am taking the liberty to request you to ask Mrs. Sitz not to compose the ode on love letters with the Congressman as the principal character. I am certain that any poem composed by the gifted Mrs. Sitz would be excellent, but I can assure you that such a poem in this instance would be misleading. The Congressman has never written any love letters. In fact, Mrs. Fulpan has often remarked that their courtship was strictly formal. I hope you will correct any erroneous impression which Mrs. Sitz has received from my unfortunate illustration.

Please give my best regards to Mrs. Sitz and tell her I look forward with pleasure to her next poem on some other subject.

Yours most sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Fannie Sitz Titillates At Word Of Love Letters.

Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Mrs. Sitz said tell you that she would not finish the ode as she admires your good judgment, but that she thinks you would have liked it as she had described you as most romantic and dashing.

Please hurry up with your explanation of Congress as I have got to make it soon.

Your faithful servant,
(Mrs.) MAGNOLIA THISTLE.

Washington, D. C.
July 15, 1937.

Mrs. Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Thistle:

Explaining Congress is difficult in a letter as there are so many important functions that a book would scarcely be adequate. But perhaps I can give you a brief sketch which will prove sufficient.

In the first place, Congress is one of the three branches of our Government which, as you know, are the legislative, administrative and judicial. You might picture our Government as a velocipede with Congress as the front wheel. All laws are passed by Congress and these are first started in the committees. Sometimes they originate in the committees and sometimes they are suggested to the committees. The important decisions are made in committee and that is where the leaders do their work. They are then brought to the floor and either passed or defeated. If they are passed and the President signs them they become law. Otherwise, vice versa or e contra.

Trusting that this will give you an adequate idea of the importance of Congress, I am

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Petunia,
July 17, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

Your letter has been a great help to me. I thought your idea about the velocipede is so cute that I showed it to Mr. Slack. He said that he thought a better illustration would be that Congress is the second spare tire, full of wind with little work expected.

I think I understand now about the laws which Congress handles. If they are passed they become the law, but if not they become vice versa, or e contra. But if the real decisions are made in the committees why do they ever debate on the floor.

I wish you would tell me when Congress meets and why. I would also like to know how it adjourns and when.

Mrs. Fannie Sitz told me yesterday that she had been reading about Congress thinking about recessing because it has no work to do and she says she is composing an ode about it.

Your faithful servant,
(Mrs.) MAGNOLIA THISTLE.

P. S.—I see where Congressman O'Connor said it was hotter than the equator there. Why?

Washington, D. C.
July 19, 1937.

Mrs. Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
My dear Mrs. Thistle:

Congress meets every January and adjourns when the weather gets hot. But this year is different because of the Supreme Court. However, the Congressman expects to insist upon Congress adjorning about August 15, although he may be willing to stay until September 1, if the other leaders insist.

The debates on the floor are made for the benefit of constituents.

Assuring you that it has been a great pleasure to give this information, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P. S.—There are several reasons including the weather. But it is hoped that a good rain and a final decision on the Supreme Court bill will cool things off in the next few weeks.

Petunia, July 21, 1937.

Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

If you haven't anything to do why are you staying in Washington? Mrs. Sitz published a poem today on the subject in the Verbena County Bugle & Gazette. It was entitled "Admonition to Congress in Classic Style, being an Octuple Ode which is an 8-lined poem." I am glad to write it down for you.

"Congress, O Congress, where art thou
And what art thou doing now
If nothing, why not the country allow
A much needed rest and how.
Hear ye the voice of the people now
And waitest another year to row
Like the Vice President so doeth thou
Packeth thy duds and geteth out now."

I want to thank you for the wonderful information you have given me and I feel sure that I can give a satisfactory explanation of Congress.

Your faithful servant,
(Mrs.) MAGNOLIA THISTLE.

P. S.—Mrs. Sitz said she had just seen in the papers that the V. P. has gone back to Washington, but she wasn't going to change the ode she had worked so hard on just because the V. P. seems to have changed his mind.

Washington, D. C., July 23, 1937.

Mrs. Magnolia Thistle,
Petunia.
Dear Mrs. Thistle:

It has been a pleasure to serve you. I feel certain that your paper before the Petunia Literary and Betterment Society will be excellent, and I regret that I cannot be present to enjoy it.

Whenever you desire any further information, please do not hesitate to call on me.

One Year Later

By Barnet Nover

Continuing Broblems.

A FORTNIGHT ago saw the first anniversary of the Austro-German agreement by which Hitler agreed to abstain from interfering in the internal affairs of Germany's Danubian neighbor and Austria, in turn, declared itself to be a "German state."

The anniversary was little noted and for a very good reason. The agreement had produced no spectacular results. Austria's plight is no better and not much worse than it was before the treaty with Berlin was signed.

If the agreement has not proved to be, as some feared it would, the first stage in the peaceful absorption of Austria by the Third Reich, it has not, on the other hand, strengthened Austria's capacity to maintain its independence. That little nation continues to face the threat of Anschluss possibly brought about through pressure from without, possibly by means of a Nazi rebellion from within. But that threat is no novel one, so far as the Schuschnigg government is concerned.

* * * *

THE REAL importance of the Austro-German agreement, as was clear at the time it was made and is even clearer now, is that it marked a new stage in Italo-German relations. With Austria made into an Italo-German condominium the Berlin-Rome axis could be forged.

But the sudden and simultaneous discovery in the Fascist capitals that there was profit to be had in working together will probably prove, in the light of history, no more of a real turning point in European history than the Austro-German agreement has proved to be.

A good deal of nonsense have been written about the ideological struggle raging in Europe during the past months, together with some demonstrable truths regarding it.

There can be no doubt that the Fascist powers individually feel themselves menaced by the existence in the world of powerful democracies which, despite gloomy predictions to the contrary, have managed to do at least as well in solving their economic problems as have the dictatorships and with infinitely less waste of human values.

It is natural, under the circumstances, for the totalitarian states to cling together. But by the very nature of their systems, the Fascist states are hostile to co-operative action even if this consists in co-operating with their fellow dictatorships.

* * * *

IT IS POSSIBLE to argue, for instance, that the German-Italian-Portuguese alliance could better withstand an insurgent defeat than an insurgent victory. Mussolini has made some bad blunders in foreign policy—not least that of giving Austria as hostage to Hitler—but the most serious blunder of all would be to permit Germany to win a foothold in Spain, the Spanish colonies or the Spanish islands.

Possibly he reckons that such a fear need not trouble his sleep. When the danger arises Great Britain will act far more vigorously than it has so far shown any inclination of doing, in preventing any great power from establishing itself within gunfire of Gibraltar. Mr. Eden's recent speeches, certainly, would seem to indicate that this is the case. But Mussolini's capacity for double-crossing Hitler is certainly no greater, potentially, than Hitler's capacity for double-crossing Mussolini. The Berlin-Rome axis continues to be as much of a question mark as ever.

The Mediterranean problem is also a continuing problem solved neither by the creation of the Berlin-Rome axis nor on the other hand, by Britain's ludicrously inadequate pact with Italy early this year.

* * * *

RELATIONS between the London and the Rome governments are certainly no better than they were a year ago when Great Britain finally washed its hands of the Italo-Ethiopian mess and wrote off sanctions as a dead loss. Nor have London's efforts to act with Olympian aloofness as arbiter in the Spanish crisis solved any problems. The boast, sometimes made in England, that the non-intervention agreement has at least postponed a general war is true only insofar as it is true that any war can be averted by capitulation.

This brings up the question of the relation of Europe's democratic powers and the totalitarian dictatorships, a problem as much alive this year as last.

Both France and Great Britain have sought, from time to time, to build a barrier between Berlin and Rome. France sought to do so by offering Italy a practically free hand in Ethiopia in return for support of the anti-German coalition in Europe. This was Laval's little masterpiece in the field of higher diplomacy. And Great Britain, for its part, has also played the game.

In her case the field of action has been wider since she could hold out the hand of friendship to Germany as well as to Italy. Which France could not easily do. It has been a complicated game. Sometimes victory either in dissociating Germany from Italy or Italy from Germany has seemed within grasp. But the impending victory has never taken place and today as the discussions concerning non-intervention reveal, Great Britain finds it necessary to start all over again.

* * * *

IT HAS BEEN said of Bismarck that his great success consisted of being able, metaphorically speaking, to keep a dozen different balls up in the air without dropping any. The statesmen of democratic lands are dropping such diplomatic balls constantly.

In extenuation they can say that it is not they but public opinion that is at fault. In part that is true. Public opinion in democratic lands including our own is befogged and confused. But courage has never been unpopular. And it is precisely because of their lack of courage that democratic statesmen have failed to bring about any improvement in the international situation.

Like squirrels in a cage, they have gone 'round and 'round but have got nowhere. The only real way out of the present dilemma is to smash a hole through the cage. If the aggressive states have won such easy victories in recent years it is because they have taken to heart Danton's slogan: "Audacity, more audacity, always audacity."

There would be far fewer of the chronic crises in the world of nations if the peace-loving nations adopted a similar course.

London Season

By William Lyon Phelps

Theatrical.

The theatrical season in London, like the social season, comes to a climax in May, June, July; and it is interesting to see what is at present drawing crowds to the metropolitan theaters over there.

"Jane Eyre" is doing well, with three matinees a week besides the evening performances. "Bats in the Belfry" is enjoying a long run. "London After Dark" I know only by title. Dorothy Sayers' story, "Busman's Honeymoon," has been successfully transferred to the stage.

* * * *

The censor has removed the ban from "Victoria Regina" and it has just been allowed to adorn the British stages, after a tremendously crowded run in New York lasting two years. I have not yet seen the comments of the drama critics. T. S. Eliot's tragedy in verse, "Murder in the Cathedral" (the death of Thomas Becket at Canterbury in the year 1170) which was put on in America first at the Yale University Theater with Day Tuttle in the leading part, and then was played in New York by the WPA, has been packing the theater in London for month after month, which seems to me almost miraculous. Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," with an all-star cast, is so successful that they have three matinees weekly, instead of the customary two. "Yes, My Darling Daughter," a blazing success in New York, was finally taken to London, where it seems to be doing well. "The Amazing Doctor Clitterhouse," which had only fair success in New York, has been enormously popular in London and is running well still.

* * * *

Turgenev's "A Month in the Country," superbly given in New York by the Theater Guild with Mme. Navimova, is doing well now in London.

There are plenty of musical comedies and light operas, and the season of grand opera (with the stars from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York) is in full career at Covent Garden.

It seems strange to Americans, with our season in New York over, and only a few plays running, that the month of July should see the height of the London season; but it is cooler there.

The blackness of the night at sea
He lightened with a spark
And made the waters of the earth
Less dangerous and dark.

The hazards of the fog and gale—
The hidden reefs and such—
The dangers far from port and friend
He lessened with his touch.

The horrors of the frightful night
When mishap comes at sea . . .
The panic on the slanting decks
Were stilled by his decree.

He stood upon Newfoundland's shore
A bleak December day
And heard faint signals span the void
And end Doom's ruthless sway.

Three dots . . . across the sea's expanse—
His signal, shore to shore!
And perils of the centuries
Would haunt men's minds no more.

The arbitrary rules of space,
The barriers of time—
He bent them to the human will
And made the world one clime.

Once fire or the iceberg's stab
Were final blows of Fate;
He sent a message through the air
And bade the Terror, "Wait!"

From Pole to Pole his magic ruled—
His was the conquest wide.
He made the far points of the world
Seem as one fireside.

Moscow Sees British Leaders Bluffed By Japanese In China

Izvestia Believes Tokyo Military Leaders Will Not Give Up Extensive Campaign Plans Unless London Conservatives Change.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Moscow, July 23.—In a discussion of recent events in North China, the government newspaper, Izvestia, today declared that Great Britain's conservative statesmen have been influenced by Japan's "threats of bluff or blackmail" just as they have been recently by other nations in Africa and western Europe.

"These is no doubt," Izvestia reads, "that in 1931 Japan succeeded in carrying out her plans in Manchuria only as a result of the passivity of the Western powers. Moreover, open toleration on the part of Great Britain played no small role in the success of Japanese aggressive action. Certain British statesmen, incorrectly judging the correlation of forces in the Far East, evidently supposed that Japanese aggression in Manchuria would unfold in an entirely different direction than North China. The fact that in her attitude to the present conflict Britain is again adopting the position of 1931 seems especially lamentable and alarming.

"Now, as then," the article continues, "the British conservative press, attempting to minimize the impression of events in China, creates the impression that the matter concerns an incident not affecting the interests of other countries. In other words, the London conservative newspapers support that version which is needed by the Japanese militarists in order to cover up their extensively thought out military operations. British conservatives are again applying in the Far East those of their favored methods which have led British policy to failures not only in the Far East but also in Africa and western Europe.

"Conservative statesmen are apparently influenced by threats of bluff or blackmail, irrespective of whether they are manufactured in the Far East or in central Europe."

Izvestia stresses Japan's violation of the promise it gave in 1931 that aggression be restricted to the boundaries of Manchuria, pointing out the Japanese occupation of Jehol the creation of a puppet "government" in Hopei, the organization of a Hopei-Chahar political council subject to Tokyo, and the subordination of six districts of Chahar.

"Now," the article continues, "Japan is attempting to occupy North China and to capture Peiping by force of arms, preparing further military penetration in central and perhaps southern China. The activities of the Japanese authorities in Formosa and the southern islands of Japan also permit the supposition of the existence of concrete aggressive plans extending farther into southern China.

"Such is the situation which points to the worthlessness of calculations on the consent of the Japanese militarists to localize the expansion begun by them. Japan will give up its agressive plans only in the event that certain trustful governments cease tolerating these plans."

Windsor and Bride In Austrian Crash

Salzburg, Austria, July 23 (AP).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor and her aunt, Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, of Washington, D. C., arrived tonight at the Mayr-Melnhof hunting lodge in Fuschl, near Salzburg, after a minor traffic accident.

Their automobile collided with a trolley car as they drove through a crowded Salzburg street. The fenders were damaged slightly, but no one was hurt. The duke's chauffeur was driving.

The duke and duchess and their guest will attend Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio," with Arturo Toscanini directing, at the opening of the Salzburg music festival tomorrow.

Roosevelt and Bride Miss Gala Reception

The local prefect had ready a gift bottle of old-vintage brandy, the largest hotel was decorated with American flags and with flowers, and the citzenry assembled last night.

But the Roosevelts drove from Paris, unaware of the reception plans, and went to a smaller hotel. The Roosevelts left for Switzerland this morning.

Miss Marsyl Stokes' Capital Debut Certain

Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Her Grandmother, to Give Ball in Fall; Daughter of Mrs. Drummond-Wolfe to 'Come Out' July 31 at Newport.

"But definitely" Miss Marsyl Stokes, daughter of Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolfe, of London, and Sylvanus Stokes, of Maryland, will have a Washington debut in the autumn. It has been rumored during the summer she would come out here after her debut in Newport July 31, and now it is a fact. Her grandmother, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of Washington, will give a large ball here in her honor early in the fall.

As Mrs. Fahnestock is one of the Capital's "grandes dames," the ball which she will give for Miss Stokes will be a high light of the coming season. Shortly after making her Washington debut, Miss Stokes will return to London, where she also will "come out."

The Newport ball at which she will be presented will be held at the home of her uncle, Harris Fahnestock, and will be preceded by a dinner given by Mrs. Drummond-Wolfe, who also has a residence there. Many of the younger set will journey from the Capital to attend the event, including Lieut. Robert Campbell, U. S. N., and Nathan Bartlett. Mr. Bartlett is leaving next Friday to be the guest of Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock during race week and until after her granddaughter's debut.

Also going to Newport for Miss Stokes' party will be Ralph Snowden Hill, of the State Department, and Clarence Hewes. The latter landed recently in New York after ten weeks in London, and during his stay paid a visit to the Duchess of Windsor at the Chateau de Cande. He is a close friend of both the duke and duchess.

Now en route to New England in his glittering Rolls Royce, Mr. Hewes will travel through the White Mountains and on up to Bar Harbor, where he will visit friends. Then he will go to Newport to stay with Mrs. Fahnestock.

This will be just the beginning of Mr. Hewes' travels. After Newport he will hop down to Flat Rock, N. C., for a stay with Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Vincent, of New Orleans, who visited him here last winter. Then he is off again by motor to California, and after a short stay there will go to his home in New Orleans before opening his Washington house late in the fall.

During his stay in London Mr. Hewes saw former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, who have taken an apartment there. He reports Mr. Bingham has embarked on writing a biography of Eli Yale, one of Connecticut's most famous sons. The former Senator, it will be recalled, was once Governor of that State. Mrs. Bingham was Mrs. John Philip Hill until her divorce last spring from the former Maryland Representative.

Dancing Stars To Appear Here

Dancing Masters Invite Diplomats and Officials as Guests.

Members of the Diplomatic corps, Cabinet members and other high-ranking Government officials have been invited to be the guests of the Dancing Masters of America, now in session at the Mayflower Hotel, at their "international night" in the ballroom of the hotel on Wednesday evening, August 4.

A gala program of entertainment, international in character, has been arranged by Leroy Thayer, of Washington, vice president of the organization. Miss Ruth Howard, of New York, editor and publisher of one of the best-known dance magazines in this country, is bringing the famous Philadelphia Ballet as the high light of the evening's program. The company, which has just returned from a tour of Europe under the direction of Catherine Littlefield, will present one of its most popular ballets. In addition, a galaxy of stars will present characteristic dances of many lands—Spanish, Cuban, Mexican, Aztec, Mayan and Indo-Chinese.

"International night" is but one of the many features being planned by Mr. Thayer, Mrs. Montie Beach, president of the organization, and other members of the committee for the entertainment of invited guests and the 600 members of the Dancing Masters of America during convention week.

Dr. Branhan Gets Degree In Colorado

Honorary Title Conferred on Capital Woman Scientist.

Tribute Climaxes Her Vacation in Western State.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Dr. Sara Branham, senior bacteriologist at the National Institute of Health, recently returned from Colorado with more than a sun tan to show for her vacation. She brought back an honorary degree of doctor of science, conferred by her alma mater, the University of Colorado, at its commencement in June.

Dr. Branham already had to her credit an M. D. and Ph. D. when she was honored by the university, from which she was graduated. She was presented for the degree by Dean Maurice Rees, of the school of medicine, and it was conferred by Dr. George Norlin, president of the institution. Later she and Judge Butler of the Colorado Supreme Court, who received an honorary degree of doctor of laws, were guests of honor at a luncheon at the home of the President and Mrs. Norlin.

Dr. Branham has not attained the age from which one looks back to say, "I remember when." However, the change which has come in transportation in 20 years impressed itself upon her, when she made the trip from here to Boulder, Colo., in 31 hours. She remembers three nights and three days of traveling from her home in Atlanta, Ga., to Boulder in 1919, when she first went West to enter the university. Timetables at least have changed since she was a college girl, she observed.

Engaged in Serum Research

She received her M. D. and Ph. D. at the University of Chicago and was an instructor there for four years. From Chicago, she went to the University of Rochester, where she was on the faculty of the medical school before coming to Washington nine years ago. Here she is in charge of the unit for research in infectious diseases, for which antibacterial serums are used in treatment. At present her work is centered chiefly on epidemic meningitis, in an effort to improve the serums.

Progress has not been rapid in this field she says. Although this is her unit's principal object of research, when anything urgent in public health arises, this work is suspended temporarily and attention given the emergency problem.

Author of Many Scientific Articles

In addition to her experimental work, Dr. Branham has written many articles for current medical journals, most of them on serum treatment. Her most recent, however, have been papers prepared in collaboration with Dr. Sanford Rosenthal of the division of pharmacology, on drug therapy in meningitis.

The conception of a woman devoted to such scientific subjects as an austere, masculine personality is entirely dispelled by Dr. Branham. She is slightly built, has wavy brown hair, which takes an auburn glint in the sunlight, and a Southern drawl accompanied by a smile revealing even white teeth. Thrifty little plants in a row of flower pots near one window of her office lend a feminine touch to an otherwise businesslike room with test-tubes and other laboratory equipment on the shelves.

Like most persons who accomplish things, Dr. Branham is modest and inclined to say little about what she has done. Medicine is not her only interest. Before she started its study she devoted her time to music and was not only a pianist, but also t teacher of piano. Music is still one of her hobbies and another is ornothology.

She is a member of the American Association of University Women, the District of Columbia Medical Society, president of the Washington branch of the Society of American Bacteriologists and a member of the District of Columbia branch of the Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine. She is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Pi, honorary research society; Alpha Omega Alpha, honorary medical fraternity, and of Alpha Delta Pi, social sorority.

Before returning from Colorado she spent ten days with friends at a cabin 9,000 feet up in the Rockies, at the foot of Mount Evans, the last 5 miles of the journey a trip on foot. There she found rest in a setting of pine and fir, preparatory to returning to her studies in her laboratory.

Business Women's Federation Renounces Special Privileges

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 23.—With a demonstration that lasted many minutes, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women resolved today to renounce any special favors accorded women by masculine-controlled government and fight for strict equality of the sexes under law.

By acclamation they voted to campaign for an amendment to the Federal Constitution which would bind Congress and the governing bodies of every State, county and municipality to pass no laws or ordinances applying solely to women.

Several speakers argued special legislation was necessary to protect women from exploitation and it appeared for a while the vote would be far from unanimous, but when Miss Gertrude Mallory, of Los Angeles, moved for support of the constitutional amendment, any dissenting vote was drowned in the cheers.

Delegates Reject Woman's Charter

The women rejected the "woman's charter," which called for equality between sexes, but at the same time provided for special legislation such as hour-and-wage laws for women workers.

Special laws might benefit some women for a time, Miss Mallory argued, but their very nature implies inequality between sexes.

The federation's board of directors likewise opposed special laws for women "since we believe sound legislation should be based on the nature of the work and and not on the sex of the worker."

"As long as women are told when and where and how they can work," added Anita Pollitzer, Congressional secretary of the National Woman's Party, "so long will they be denied equal opportunity for advancement, equal pay for equal work, and equal chance to find work."

New Officers Are Elected

As business sessions of the convention came to a close, the women elected Miss Earlene White, of Washington, as president for the next two years. Miss White, who had no opposition, succeeds Miss Charl Ormond Williams, of Washington.

Mrs. Rosa Cunningham, of Des Moines, Iowa, was elected first vice president; Dr. Minnie L. Moffett, of Dallas, Tex., second vice president, and Mrs. Myra Blakeslee, of East Orange, N. J., third vice president.

Miss Celia Howard, of Chicago, was elected recording secretary, and Miss Isabel Claridge, of Wheeling, W. Va., treasurer.

The women adopted resolutions urging Congress to continue support of the Federal Women's and Children's Bureau under the Labor Department, and urging Federal aid to education, but reserving to the States full control of expenditures for schools.

Stage Party For Miss White

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THINGS ARE pretty quiet this summer over at the American Association of University Women's clubhouse. Aside from the informal Monday afternoon teas—and there'll be a program tomorrow—not much is going on. Most of the members are on vacation and even the president (as is the way of presidents) is soon going on a fishing trip.

Mrs. Richard Hogue, who is both president of the local branch of the A. A. U. W. and on the joint operating committee in charge of the national clubhouse at 1634 I street northwest, is going on a fishing trip with Mr. Hogue. Just where, they have not yet decided, but it is to be some place in the Blue Ridge Mountains where the fish enjoy biting.

Now it is not to be supposed by those knowing Mrs. Hogue that she spends all her vacation digging worms, baiting hooks or patiently clutching a bamboo pole. She leaves the actual mechanics of fishing up to Mr. Hogue, while she does the rowing. That may seem the hardest part, but she prefers it to the more skilled labor of catching the fish. She takes a book along and, when there's no rowing to do, she reads while Mr. Hogue maneuvers for his catch.

Dr. Winifred Richards, another member of the A. A. U. W. and chief psychologist at St. Elizabeths, is teaching in California this summer. Her book, "Personality, Its Structure and Development," came off the press a short time ago.

Dr. Richards, although she is not an officer of the A. A. U. W., frequently leads study groups in problems in the field of psychology.

• • • •

Miss Anna Halberg, of Wilson Teachers College, who makes her home at the A. A. U. W., is spending her summer in Chicago.

• • • •

Miss Mary Louise Brown, dean of women at American University and chairman of the international relations committee of the A. A. U. W., is on a tour of the British Isles and central Europe.

• • • •

And, to check up on a few others who are vacationing: Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, head of the National Training School, will spend the month of August at her cabin at Allen Park, Colo., in the beautiful Longs Peak section.

• • • •

MRS. HORACE TORBERT, chairman of the program committee, is not so far away but still is on a vacation. She is spending the summer at Arlington Hall, Arlington, Va., and there devoting part of her time to working out plans for the coming season at the club.

Mrs. Robert Olesen, new vice president and chairman of the education committee, is enjoying the cool comfort of her cottage at Ephraim, Wis., on Green Bay. Her son and daughter are there with her and Dr. Olesen will join them later in the summer.

Mrs. David Wing, chairman of the fellowship fund committee, is at Camp Hegone, in Maine, and Mrs. Robert McFall, with Mr. McFall and their two daughters, will spend August at their summer home in Maine.

Mrs. Frank A. Edgington, a director of the club, is at Milford, Pa., for the summer; Mrs. William D. Corbin, also a director, is at her summer home in Vermont, and Mrs. Leslie Whitten and her young sons are now in Alabama, visiting her parents.

Bar to Merit Rule Removed

Miss Marguerite Wells Is Pleased by Economy Section Repeal.

The decisive action of the Senate in voting unanimously to repeal section 213 of the economy act, following quickly on the heel of similar action by the House, eliminates a barrier of five years' standing to the application of the merit principle in government employment, according to Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters.

The league has been vigorously opposed to this discriminatory legislation ever since its passage and has been working actively for repeal for the past five years.

Senate action came in the form of clean-cut repeal, thus ruling out the possibility of a so-called compromise, proposed by the House Committee on Civil Service, which would have eliminated one evil only to substitute another. Repeal of section 213 not only wipes off the statute books a policy of discrimination in connection with government employment but also allows the reinstatement on eligible lists of persons discharged under its provisions, Miss Wells pointed out.

Md. Regiments Shatter Dawn In Sham Battle

Machine Guns, Airplanes and Trucks Modernize Fight for 'Gold.'

By Phillip J. Austensen,
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 23.—Rattle of musketry and the rat tat tat of machine guns shattered the peaceful calm of this scenic camp as the two regiments of the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, Maryland National Guard, were pitted against each other in sham battle shortly after daybreak today.

The First Infantry, lomposed of County units and commanded by Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, defended a mythical store of gold at one end of the parade ground. The Fifth Infantry, commanded by Col. Frank A. Hancock, a Baltimore regiment, was the attacking unit.

Both units left camp yesterday as the Fifty-eighth Brigade to establish an overnight camp near Ring Gold, Md. The two regiments pitched their tents along the Mason-Dixon line.

Staff Sleeps in Open.

The First silently folded their tents and stole away at midnight to take up position near camp and be in readiness for the attack.

The Fifth marched from the bivouac back to camp, about 4 miles, before launching the attack. Most of the action of the battle took place on the parade ground in full view of a large group of spectators from nearby summer resorts.

Gen. Woodcock and his staff watched the battle from the porch of the chateau in camp.

Trucks, Planes Used.

The Fifth was supported by trucks and air force while the First was without both. In a modernization of the enveloping movement used so successfully at Chancellorsville by Stonewall Jackson, the Fifth sent its reserve battalion by truck to the rear of the camp and launched an attack on the right flank of the First. This was the first time trucks had been used in the brigade to develop an envelopment movement.

At a critique which followed the battle, Gen. Woodcock complimented the officers and men of both regiments for the manner in which they had carried out the problems.

The brigade was saddened during maneuvers by news of the death of Maj. Samuel B. Riggs, of Rockville, Md., who has been a member of the Maryland National Guard since the Mexican border expedidage of 16. He was a member of tion in 1916, when he enlisted at the the State staff and one of the most popular officers in the Maryland Guard.

The Fifth Regiment will return to its home station in Baltimore tomorrow while the First will remain at camp for another week of training.

Montgomery County residents will be guests of the Service Company of Silver Spring and Howitzer Company of Kensington Sunday at visitors' day of the First Infantry. The regiment will parade Sunday afternoon.

Writer Who Turned Crusader Wins British Divorce Reform

A. P. Herbert, Humorist, in Long Fight Obtains Law Adding Three More Causes for Legal Severing of Marital Bonds.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 23.—The fight of a humorist turned crusader against the "holy deadlock" of England's rigid divorce laws was victorious today when Parliament completed enactment of far-reaching changes in the conditions for terminating marriage.

Adultery is now the only grounds for divorce in England. When the new law becomes effective next January 1, these will be added:

Desertion without cause for at least three years; cruelty; incurable insanity for five years.

The new law will apply only to England and Wales, not to Scotland or northern Ireland. Scotland already recognizes desertion as grounds for divorce.

Triumph for Writer.

The new act was hailed as a triumph for A. P. Herbert, who first achieved fame as a member of the staff of Punch; wrote in his novel, "Holy Deadlock," a powerful indictment of present divorce laws, and carried his fight for liberalization to the House of Commons when he achieved election as an independent member from Oxford University in 1935.

Advocates of more liberal conditions for divorce had fought an uphill battle for a quarter century.

Today's action consisted of the commons' acceptance of amendments in the House of Lords to Herbert's original bill, which the commons had approved. The act now needs only the King's assent, which is automatic.

Most important of the amendments was a provision that no divorce petition shall be made until three years after marriage. The original bill had specified five years.

Members of the House who laughed when Herbert announced in his maiden speech, December 4, 1935, that he intended to sponsor a bill "removing the indecent, hypocritical, cruel and unjust marriage laws of this country," cheered him and shook his hand today.

Many Attempts Failed.

Then it was considered impossible to obtain divorce reform. Numerous attempts had failed. Herbert was accused of tilting against windmills. Today the jubilant author said: "I hope there won't be too much talk about a 'personal triumph,'" and went on to name those who had helped him.

"Last but not least," he said, was "the much maligned king's proctor, Sir Thomas Barnes."

Sir Thomas Barnes figured in the divorce case of Mrs. Ernest Simpson, now the Duchess of Windsor, as the official charged with supervising the conduct of parties to a divorce during the six months that must elapse between the conditional decree and absolute divorce.

Mrs. Simpson's divorce, which freed her to marry the former King Edward VIII, spurred public interest in the divorce question but had no direct effect on today's legislation, which was originated a year before the abdication crisis.

Rebels Claim Big Gains on Madrid Front

Advance to Brunete Is Reported; Aragon Frontier Closed.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, July 23.—Spanish insurgents tonight declared their forces, seizing the offensive in the great battle for Madrid, were reducing the government's new salient on that front and had penetrated into the important town of Brunete.

From the Aragon front, however, came reports of a grave insurgent setback. These said government forces had captured Huesca. There was no confirmation, and soon after the reports began to circulate the insurgent authorities closed the frontier.

This step has been taken before when important developments were impending.

Huesca, 150 miles west of Barcelona, has long been the objective of Catalan forces allied with the Madrid-Valencia regime. No official information on the status of that front was available tonight.

Menace to Rebels.

Brunete, 15 miles west of Madrid, lies at the southern tip of a thumb-shaped bulge the government offensive begun two weeks ago made in the insurgent lines, which before that ran generally westward from the northwest corner of Madrid.

This 100-square-mile salient is a grave menace to the insurgent siege lines along Madrid's western fringe, and since Sunday the men of Gen. Francisco Franco have been fighting desperately to destroy it.

The government defenders of Brunete, said insurgent dispatches, still were holding part of the town and making a stubborn stand behind fortifications in the cemetery.

15 Killed in Madrid.

Madrid, July 23 (AP).—Newly shattered buildings and blood-splashed pavements today reminded Madrid that it is still besieged and within range of enemy cannon despite recent successful thrusts of its defenders.

After two weeks free from bombardment, while the government offensive bit into insurgent lines west of Madrid, the capital was heavily shelled twice in 24 hours.

The city counted 15 killed and 20 injured, many in the squares and main avenues of the city. Including casualties in other bombardments 15 miles from Madrid and in Toledo province, a total of about 70 dead and 150 wounded civilians was added to the war's toll.

If Your Girl Works in Commerce You'd Better Write Her at Home

Even love, that sometimes secret and bashful thing, comes within the scope of a memorandum to Commerce Department employes, a memorandum tacked to the walls hard by Secretary Roper's recent "little memorandum" forbidding gambling in all its forms and the department's superiors from putting the underlings on the cuff.

This time, Frank T. Bell, commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries, takes note of grumblings about the opening of personal mail in the mail room and issues a ukase reciting the history of the issue and a final notice that the mail, personal, confidential and otherwise, is going to be opened.

The issue has a fairly lengthy and somewhat involved background, as follows:

Under date of March 4, 1937, a memorandum was written by the Chief Clerk of the department stating that "to relieve the department of work involved and to effect prompt delivery, it is requested that employes, so far as possible, have their personal mail addressed to their residences." This manifesto was circulated under date of March 8.

Then, under date of March 20, 1937, a memorandum signed by the Chief Clerk indicated that all mail would be opened in the mail room. Confusion variously confounded, and with embroidery of small indignations, arose and the Commissioner has taken notice, he says:

"So that there will be no further misunderstanding all incoming mail, including mail marked 'personal' or 'confidential,' will be opened and stamped in the mail room. Officials will arrange to have their personal mail sent to their home address."

Greek Church Leader Dies; Poison Hinted

By the United Press.

Belgrade (Saturday), July 24.—Patriarch Varnave, hea of the Greek Orthodox Church in Yugoslavia, whose followers claimed he was poisoned because of a fight against a Vatican concordat, died last midnight.

The patriarch's death heightened the crisis between Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholics, and police reinforcements were sent into the streets of Belgrade to prevent new violence between the sects.

Two brothers of Varnave became seriously ill at the same time the church leader was stricken, and little hope was held for their recovery.

The Skuptschina, lower house of Parliament, passed the concordat with the Holy See by a vote of 162 to 124. Concern over the measure was emphasized when even sick members of factions for and against the concordat were carried into the chamber to participate in the voting.

Twelve members of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich's Agrarian (Government) Party voted against the bill.

A reading in the Senate reportedly will be postponed in an effort to alleviate tension it was feared might lead to a religious war.

The Orthodox Church claims to be the official church of Yugoslavia, and its members opposed the concordat because they felt it would remove much of their power.

Twice this week Greek Orthodox Catholics clashed with police who were instructed by the government to break up Orthodox demonstrations against the concordat.

The church excommunicated Premier Stoyadinovich and other government officials because of their support of the measure.

Picnic Meal Easily Made Real Treat

Properly Planned Menu May Rival Home-Cooked Feast.

Hot Dishes as Well as Cold Fare Should Be Included.

By Rebekah Blake.

MOTHERS, don't hesitate about eating summer meals out of doors this year when the children tease for a "picnic" for a meal in the park may be just as nourishing and appetizing as one on your own dining room table. Daddy will like it, too, for substantial dishes may be included in the picnic basket as well as favorite sandwiches for the kiddies. And you don't have to eat on the ground with pesky ants crawling across your legs. Modern parks furnish tables and benches for fashionable picnickers.

What can one take on a picnic besides baked beans or potato salad? A question which has no doubt puzzled many homemakers. The picnic season is short and too many persons are inclined to make a picnic so elaborate the family can only enjoy them a few times a season, because mother just can't find time to make all the necessary preparations. So often the picnic menu from year to year sees no change and after your favorite one has been used several times the urge for outdoor meals may begin to lag.

Hot Dish Menu.

Hot dishes as well as cold are to be included in this year's picnic meal. This isn't as unreasonable as it sounds. Thermos bottles and jars and baking dishes hold heat for several hours, long enough for your trip from town and country, and when wrapped in several layers of newspapers, you are sure of a hot course when the meal is served.

Of course the old standby, sandwiches, deviled eggs, tomatoes and cookies are still indispensable in a picnic menu, but why not include a real for-sure mixed salad bowl? These are so unexpected when brought forth, out in the wilds of a woods, and are especially interesting to the grown ups who think sandwiches don't furnish enough sustenance.

There are a number of ways to be prepared for the picnic impulse. Sandwich spreads should be on hand in the refrigerator and your supply shelf well stocked with such picnic essentials as olives, pickles, ketchup, mustard, chili sauce, mayonnaise and peanut butter. In addition to plenty of food you should also have adequate picnic equipment; it need not be elaborate or expensive, but this will do much in the way of giving everyone more time for fun. Plan your picnic menu to include easily prepared foods, either the sort that are cooked on the spot or those that are prepared at home for the ready-to-eat-picnic. You will certainly agree that plenty of a few foods is much better than little of several different kinds.

Remember the Salt.

It is indeed disappointing and capable of spoiling the picnic to arrive at the point where the steaks are ready to be seasoned and find the salt has been left behind. Why not keep a supply of such condiments in the picnic basket and then they will not be forgotten so easily. Here is another pitfall for picnic making—openers to fit the various types of jars and cans that are taken along in baskets.

Who ever heard of counting calories on picnics, or even trying to balance the menu? No one probably, but in sort of a quiet way, the one responsible for the food will have to budget the types of food that are to be included. She will, if she is smart, try to include a substantial main dish to be supplemented by a beverage, and some fruits or vegetables, and she should be sure to include plenty of the accessories to a good picnic, the foods that put the pep and zest into the menu.

Guide for Books.

Prepare at home dishes: Potato salad and cooked wieners. Baked noodles with veal. Spanish rice. Chili in casserole. Spaghetti with meat balls. Baked beans. Kidney bean salad. Mixed vegetable salad. Mixed fruit salad. Deviled eggs. Macaroni salad, varied by adding tuna fish, salmon or shrimp.

Condiments and relishes: Chili sauce, ketchup. Pickles. Relish. Mustard. Celery salt. Onion salt. Olives.

Fantastic Furs Make Paris Debut

Paris (AP).—Fantastic fur fashions have made their debut in the Pavilion d'Elegance at the exposition here.

One full-skirted evening frock is made entirely of black pony skins with white pony inset in large clover leaf motifs. Other evening dresses, fashioned of colored velvet which serves as a mere background, are liberally laden with silver foxes and have decolletes edged with fox skins.

Evening wraps show striking designs. Revillon makes one entirely of red foxes, while another designer displays a full length coat of white fox having the skins posed on wrist georgette. Panels of gray monkey accent a third wrap designed of silver cloth and finished with a green and silver belt.

Sumptuous capes appear in rich dark sables, white fox, mink and ermine. Some in seven-eighths length have rounded-up fronts and stunning modern clasps to fasten them at the neck. A long white ermine cape is bordered with red fox.

Picnic Needs Should Always Be Ready

If your family ejoys picnicking, have a special basket with picnicking necessities always ready to go. Your basket should be roomy and so arranged that food may bbe carried without damage. Wrap or cover each dish so it will not impart its odors to other foods. With proper packing hot dishes may be carried to the picnic grounds.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Mother Addicted to Drink Has Lost Child and Husband; She Asks How to Regain Them.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been a reader of your column for some time and have been struck by the fine and considerate answers you print in reply to correspondents who bring their problems to you. This fact gives me courage to write regarding my own difficulties.

* * * *

Since my fifteenth year I have been a drinker of intoxicating liquors. They were served always in my family, even during prohibition years, and I grew fond of taking cocktails and mint juleps and of drinking a little wine at dinner. Then I met a man to whom I was attracted. He drank, too, about the same amount as I did. We fell in love and were married.

* * * *

When our child, a boy, was born, we decided that we would stop drinking for his sake. My husband did stop, but I continued to drink secretly. Little by little the habit grew upon me until I could not control it. I loved my husband and my child and realized the danger that I was in. But I could not stop. My family and friends endeavoured to help me. Still the passion for liquor grew on me. It led to other complications and, at last, my husband forced me to divorce him. He has taken our boy, now 9 years old, and I only see him once a month. I must confess that I am still drinking, harder than ever now, for there is little left for me. How can I win my husband, whom I still love, and my boy back to me.

A DESPAIRING MOTHER.

Put First Things First.

DEAR DESPAIRING MOTHER: The big question that is before you and which you must answer by your own actions is whether you love liquor more than you do your husband and your child? No doubt, you will say at once "Of course, love my husband and my child more than I do liquor." But that cannot be true or you would not be in your present situation.

* * * *

It is easy to understand how the habit grew upon you. You were gripped by it long before you realized what it was doing to you. The responsibility for that condition, of course, rests upon those who permitted you to drink at such an early age. Undoubtedly that habit planted in you a desire for liquor that was the beginning of your tragedy.

* * * *

The first step in the destruction of your home life came when you broke faith with your husband at the time your son was born and did not keep your promise to avoid the use of intoxicating liquors. He kept his word, why should you not have kept yours? Certainly the same daily temptation to overindulge is not before a homemaker to the extent it is to a man out in the work-a-day world, where a drink or two is regarded more or less as a matter of course. Naturally, your husband cannot permit you to see your son too often. He would be remiss in his duty toward his child if he let the boy remain with you while you are still drinking.

* * * *

There is only one way for you to win back your husband's love and the companionship of your child. Keep the promise you made at the time of the child's birth. Stop drinking, and this means STOP. Remember the first drink is the one where you break your promise.

* * * *

If the habit has fastened on you to the degree that has led to this disaster, it might be well for you to obtain professional help in overcoming it and establishing a permanent cure. Consult your family physician. He will be able to give you good advice in this regard. A few weeks or even months in some institution where you can be helped in your desire to stop drinking will not harm you and may prove the path to a cure.

* * * *

But, above all, remember that you alone can cure yourself. Until you really love your husband and child more than the drink, there is little hope for you.

Slipshod Speech Rates You

"M-M-M. I wisht I coud see that pitcher," says Gladys as "Coming Attractions" are flashed on the screen.

But there's not a chance in the world of Bill's taking her since he discovered how embarassing her pronounciation is.

He's wishing she'd say PIK-chur for picture and drop the "t" sound she adds to wish. And he does hope his friends in the row behind don't hear her read:

"At this the-AYter soon, RiVEERa ROWT, a stupenjus ROmance, pitcher of the deeCAYD."

Learn to say THEEater, Ree-vee-AY-rah, ROOT for route. Avoid a "j" sound in stupendous. Say roMANCE and DEKade for decade.

Slips like these cut you off from the kind of people you'd like to know. Take a little time to check up on the pronounciation of common words to make a good impression socially and in business.

Don't stumble over words that appear again and again in the news. Say QUINtuplets, AYviation for aviation, dickTAYter for dictator, NAHtsee for Nazi, DIRigible.

Don't show that you're a stick-in-the-mud by saying names of towns wrong. Speak of Too-SONN for Tucson, Ariz.; SpoKAN for Spokane, Wash.; Soo City for Sioux City, Iowa; TERi Hote for Terre Haute, Ind.; GLOSter for Gloucester, Mass.

Check up on your pronunciation with the help of our 40-page booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," and feel sure of yourself. It lists common pitfalls of speech for you to avoid. Gives pronunciations accepted by cultured people.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 23.

WE REACHED the white-hot climax of our sailing season on the docks the other day, when the mighty Normandie shoved off with a truly astonishing human cargo aboard. What a shipload! Not only did she carry diplomats of all nations, department store tycoons and stylists, and even three of the Soviet fliers, but a collection of screen and radio people so colorful as to practically drive the newspapermen out of their wits. Comic Jack Benney and his Mary Livingston, ditto Jack Pearl and his wife, Peggy Hopkins Joyce and orchids, and last but far from least, Marlene Dietrich and her husband, Herr Sieber, and daughter, Maria, who is now as tall as her mother and very pretty, too. Dietrich, of course, outdrew everybody else, and was very nice to the cameramen, even though she had scurried off the train at Harmon, N. Y., 40 miles from the Grand Central Terminal, in order to duck the mob at the deppo.

ALICE HUGHES.

The toothsome Teuton looked stunning in a tan tailored suit, topped by a sage-geen felt hat and a matching scarf. But what caught the puzzled eyes of the reporters was a new hand ornament which they described as a combination gold bracelet and ring. What they didn't catch about this unusual gadget is its intention, which was told me by its designer, John Frederics. The back of the hand, says this millinery madman, is the prettiest part of a girl's paw—yet it goes unadorned. So—he created this flat gold design to lie against the back of the hand, and it is attached about one finger and at the wrist. And what more admired hand than la Dietrich's to try out this silly gadget?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Every crowd-attracting event hero requires the presence and services of a nodder and head-shaker. I remembered this as I entered the magnificent temple Emanuel-El on Fifth avenue for the funeral of the lamented George Gershwin. On duty at the door, as nodder or otherwise, was one of our girls who knows more musical people probably than any one else in town. She is Henrietta Malkiel, talent agent, who handles the business affairs of many of the leading lights. A nod from Henrietta sent the arrival to the front pews downstairs, while a tiny head wag dispatched them to seats in the balcony. Since she and I were schoolmates, I managed to achieve a nod. Incidentally the ceremonies were brief, tasteful and beautiful . . .

Our society chatterers have been gabbing a bit since the Roosevelt-duPont wedding, about the size of the wedding cake at the happy event. Now one of them has quieted all this by saying impressively that the cake was a mere muffin compared with the one baked some years ago for the marriage of Estelle Manville, the roofing heiress, and Count Folke Bernadotte, nephew of Sweden's King. That, he says, was the world's champion wedding cake. So, take that, you duPonts!

Ever since the French aperitif Dubonnet made such a splurge as a fashion color two seasons ago, all sorts of commercial products have been straining every ligament to do the same trick. The latest is celotex, a building material somewhat like beaver board, which is trying to launch its color as a stylish note. It is a sort of beige. Watch out for this new shade, not only on your walls but on your backs as well.

We are losing one of our outstanding women to our sister-metropolis, Chicago. Miss Charlotte E. Carr, who fills the important job of directing our town's home relief bureau, is going to the Windy City to become head of Hull House, that monument to the late Jane Addams. Miss Carr has had vast experience in all branches of social work, and our loss is certainly Chicago's gain.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Healthful Exposure.

IF YOU ARE one of those who believe that our "artificial civilization is holding you down, physically and spiritually, your time is at hand to return to nature. Summer is here and beckons you to natural, if not to primitive, surroundings. And while I agree with Dr. Yerbury Dent in his lately published "The Human Machine," that "going back to nature" is a phrase that has no meaning, that civilized town life is as natural as life in the country or in the bush, or in a nudist colony, or in the primeval sea, still there are certain natural things that we can do in the summertime better than in the winter.

One is to let our skins breathe. I most heartily endorse the modern habit of exposing most of the skin to sun and air. One sees it more at the beaches, but even in the midst of a busy city thoroughfare there are bare legs and arms and necks aplenty. It is a good and healthy thing, and I only wish the men would to a greater extent emulate the women in this hygienic fashion. Think of the horrible suits that our grandparents wore, that covered up every inch of skin, and suffocated it just as much as staying indoors in the winter.

The reactions of the skin are far more numerous than we yet know. We are learning something about them, and the more we know the more we realize how profoundly they affect the "internal" mechanisms.

The effect of sunlight on the skin is, for one thing, to form Vitamin D which, among other functions, probably conditions muscular tone. After being formed in the skin, this is stored in the liver.

Many drugs and other (toxic) substances, when injected by a hypodermic needle into the real skin itself, have a far more rapid action than when injected beneath the skin or into the blood stream. In many instances they have peculiar effects entirely different from those produced by their presence in the blood. A drug which when taken by mouth or injected in the blood-stream simply causes sweating, will, when injected into the skin itself, cause an extensive eruption and vomiting.

Thus the play of air and sun over the skin produces changes in the small blood vessels, flooding some areas, emptying others, and this circulatory massage stimulates the heart and through it all the internal organs. Chemical reactions in the blood occur and elimination is stimulated.

Bob Burns Says:

By Bob Burns.

These bright and cheerful girls who are the life of the party have no trouble havin' all the beaus they want but I want 'ta tell you, when a fella is figgerin' on gettin' married, he wants a girl with some domestic qualities. We had one of them butterfly type of girls down home one time. The boys all liked to take her to ice cream socials and things like that, but none of 'em would propose to her. Finally, two strangers came to town and they both started courtin' her.

One day one of 'em told the other one, he says, "I know this is gonna hurt you but I proposed to Maimy and she accepted me." He said, "The reason I proposed to her is because underneath her gayety, I know she's a home-body because every night she sits there and darns her father's socks." The The other fella says, "Well, she purt near caught me on that, too, until I noticed it was always the same sock!"

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

U. F. W. A. Notes

Jacob Baker, provisional president, U. F. W. A., finds aid and comfort:

"President Roosevelt's statement to the press has given considerable impetus to the drive (the U. F. W. A.'s drive). . . . Government workers who were holding back have been reassured by the President's reaffirmation of their right to join a union of their own choosing. . . . In the recent poll taken by the Institute of Public Opinion, 30 per cent voted for the C. I. O., although they were almost completely unfamiliar with our program. . . . When they understand our objectives we fully expect the United Federal Workers drive to be as successful as the steel and automobile drives of the C. I. O."

* * * *

The initial organizational structure of the U. F. W. A. is now complete. Janet Gaines, Daniel C. Kessler, Elizabeth Hale and Walter Krimont, U. F. W. A. organizers, have been chosen by Henry Rhine, chief organizer, to aid established locals in acquiring firm organizational footholds in their respective agencies.

* * * *

The chartered locals in the District of Columbia are located in WPA, Agriculture, Congressional secretaries, Resettlement Administration, Securities and Exchange Commission, Rural Electrification, I. C. C., General Accounting Office, Treasury, Social Security Board, Farm Credit Administration, and Central Statistical Board.

Odd-Appearing: Jacob Baker minus his pipe at the meeting in the South Agriculture auditorium the other night. . . . Maybe that's why he spoke so briefly—so that he could hurry off the rostrum to the pipe.

Some sentences, (ripped, maybe, from their context) that stood out in the speech by Mordecai Ezekiel: "Government functions through men and laws. Every Government worker, no matter how humble, is an official of the Government; on him rests some part of the responsibility for maintaining the impartial and unfailing service that is the essence of Government. . . . The French use the term 'functionary' to express this sense of responsibility. . . . Unions can help to break the shell of bureaucratic buck-passing where real injustice has been done and can thus contribute to improving the workers' morale. . . . It is a definite personnel policy of this Department (Agriculture) to aid its employes to secure better positions, as rapidly as they fit themselves for higher work and as opportunities arise. . . . If union officials expect themselves to be taken seriously by the administrators with whom they confer, they must confine their requests to those things that lie within the administrator's power. Only those matters possible within the framework of existing laws and Presidential orders are worth pushing."

Meet Mr. Stewart

You will read in another section of The Post the promotion of Charles A. Stewart to the position of deputy governor of the FCA, filling the place of Herbert Emmerich, recently resigned to become associate director of the Public Administration Clearing House in Chicago.

Stewart has been associated with the FCA since 1933, and as deputy production commissioner he has been active in developing the national system of production associations.

Before coming to the FCA he was manager in charge of the livestock loan operations of the National Feeder and Finance Corporation of Chicago, and prior to that time was secretary of the National Livestock Producers Association, having general supervision of marketing agencies and livestock loans.

He was livestock marketing director of the Illinois Agriculture Association in Chicago for two years and before that time was associated with a commission firm as cattle salesman and livestock loan man at the Union Stockyards. Before going to Chicago, he was a livestock producer and feeder and continues an interest in that field.

The FCA announces appointments in the Washington office, as follows: Christine Gilson, of Baltimore—Administrative Division, General Files Section; Samuel X. Mitchell, of Junction City, Ore.—Credit Union Section, and John P. Gooch, of Washington—Administrative Division, Mail Room.

Army Medical School Prepares Enough Typhoid Vaccine Yearly To Protect 1,000,000 Persons; Panama Carrier Supplies New Strain

Technician William Falzett sends his typhoid bacilli to the "death house." He places a 2-liter jar, containing about 24,000,000 of them, in an electric chamber which will be heated to a temperature of 132 degrees Fahrenheit. An hour later the germs will be dead.

Here the bacilli are being given their "last meal" before their lives end. Technician Falzett is putting the teeming millions of deadly bacteria into a jar, containing meat soup. He has taken all sterile precautions. The germs go to the "death chamber" well fed. They gorge themselves on the food, much as so many tiny convicts, who do not know they are about to die for the good of science and humanity.

Post Staff Photos.

Technician Falzett now bottles the finished vaccine. This flows from the large glass container through a rubber tube into the small bottles inside the sterile cabinet. Now the vaccine is ready for use. In the battle against infection, three "shots" in the arm provide immunization against typhoid fever.

Watching the poor little fellows being taken down "the last mile" and placed in the death chamber, then the executioner turning on the juice, doesn't make you feel badly because they are just ornery killers getting a dose of their own medicine.

They're in the Army now, "it" in the old Army game whose rule is "a good typhoid bacillus is a dead one." For not only is the dead bug harmless, but also mighty useful, nay, indispensable, in the prevention of one of the most dreaded of all fevers.

Today every drop of the Federal Government's supply of typhoid vaccine is being prepared at the Army Medical School in Washington. Principal consumers are the Army, Navy, Public Health Service, Marine Corps and Civilian Conservation Corps.

In the United States, as elsewhere, the military has always pioneered in efforts to reduce the death and disability toll, once frightfully high, claimed by typhoid. Vaccination against the disease originated with the British, seeking to protect their soldiers sent to South Africa to fight the Boer war.

Immunization was still relatively recent when this country entered the World War, yet there was little typhoid in the A. E. F. because every man had had his "shots" before embarkation. The vaccine which the Army is using is an improvement over the old. It is stronger and more lasting, yet less unpleasant in its reaction.

Up to four or five months ago Uncle Sam was making and using a vaccine prepared from bacilli whose virulence, or killing power, was quite low. That is, it took something like a half billion of the bugs to kill a white mouse in three days or less.

Then early last spring, following two years of painstaking experimentation, the Army adopted a new vaccine constructed of much deadlier baccili. Only 75,000,000 of them suffice to liquidate the mouse. That may still sound like a lot of bacilli until one considers that it takes a billion of the organisms to make up a cubic centimeter.

This new standard strain, known as No. 58, came from a civilian Army employe who is working today at the Panama Canal. He is as healthy as a millionaire uncle, yet his body produces a steady supply of deadly typhoid germs for the laboratory here.

Investigations under the direction of Col. Joseph F. Siler, director of the Army Medical School, showed that No. 58 was the best all-'round strain of seven which were studied. The Army Surgeon General approved its adoption, to the exclusion of all other varieties, and now the Panama carrier is famous in an anonymous way.

It is not necessary, of course, to obtain directly from him all the billions upon billions of bacilli required by the Army. He simply supplies a batch from time to time, then the organisms are allowed to multiply here. This is a simple process. You just place a few million of them in a jar containing a meat broth, called the medium, then transfer the colony to an incubator and within 24 hours you have 1,000 times as many bacilli as you had in the beginning.

Strict sterility must be observed and there are numerous complicated steps in between but that, in effect, is the process—give the killers plenty to eat, put them in a warm spot then let nature take its course.

These artifically produced bacilli are just as deadly as those that came from the carrier in Panama. But they don't get a chance to work any harm for the "death house" is only a few yards from the incubator. Bottled in a salt solution, the organisms are placed in the metal chamber and after 60 minutes in 132 degrees of temperature they are dead.

And that's your typhoid vaccine. Nothing more nor less than millions of dead bacilli swimming in salt water.

Personnel turnover in the laboratory, whose workers are all soldiers, is rapid. The reason, though, is not what one might think—unwillingness to be exposed, day after day, to live, virulent typhoid spreaders. Rather, it is the drab routine. Preparing media . .. counting bacilli . . . sterilizing equipment . . . stamping bottles. Same old thing, day in, day out.

It is not uncommon for the technicians to swallow a mouthful of the deadly organisms, especially while getting newly born ones out of the bottle. Yet there has never been a case of typhoid fever among laboratory employes. Not only are they protected by "shots," but their immunization has been gradually developed to near perfection by regular contacts with the cause of the disease.

The vaccine production season lasts from mid-September to early May. Right now the output is almost nil, though bottles and jars filled with the life-protecting substance are being sent all the year around to Army posts, Government departments and elsewhere. One thousand liters of vaccine, enough to give the necessary three "shots" each to 330,000 persons, are always kept in reserve for emergencies.

The laboratory is turning out sufficient vaccine to immunize 1,000,000 persons a year. It is equipped to step up production ten-fold in case of war and, with certain additions in refrigeration and incubation apparatus, could double that increase.

Electric Rate Cut Promised District Soon

Elgen, Utility Commissioner, Assures Slash in January.

Present Charges Declared Below Those in Other Cities.

Electric power rates for the District of Columbia will be lowered again in January, Riley E. Elgen, public utilities commissioner, promised yesterday.

Replying to charges on the floor of the House the day before by Representative Walter M. Pierce, of Oregon, that the Potomac Electric Power Co. was exacting "unconscionable profits" here, Elgen produced data which he said showed rates in the District are second lowest in the country.

"Our rates are so much below those charged by most privately owned plants, there is no use comparing them," Elgen said. He then showed comparative rates with municipally-owned plants. While Washington was not second low in all classifications, its rates were well in line with the lowest charged anywhere.

Average 98 Cents a Month.

Customers who can use electricity for light only and have no money to spare for appliances, whom Elgen called the "25-kilowatt-hour group," pay an average of 98 cents a month here. Clevelanders in this bracket pay 88 cents. Los Angeles, Columbus and Fort Wayne pay $1. All others were higher.

Most customers, all over the country, use about 80 kilowatt-hours a month. They come in the "100-kilowatt-hour" group. In this bracket Washington was in sixth place. The rankings follows:

Takoma (per mo.)	$2.12
Kansas City (per mo.)	2.80
Springfield, Ill. (per mo.)	3.02
Los Angeles (per mo.)	3.04
Cleveland (per mo.)	3.05
Washington (per mo.)	3.10

The above rates are for cities owning their own light and power plants. In cities where private utilities supply current, the rates are higher, Elgen stated.

In the "250-kilowatt-hour" group, Washington ranked seventh with an average cost per month to the customer of $5.65. Takoma was lowest with $3.62.

Elgen did not state what the reduction in rates next January would be here, but indicated it would about equal the $504,000 cut off the District's light bill last January, as a result of Pepco excess earnings.

Earnings Above Limit.

A check on the earnings of the Potomac Electric Light & Power Co. showed that the company has been taking in a revenue in excess of its allowed 6½ per cent on investment during the past several years. Last year, for example, it earned 7.91 per cent, or $5,545,000 on its investment, which was valued at $70,000,000.

"Washington gets the lowest rate of any city in the country from privately owned utilities," Elgen said. "The District is known from coast to coast for its low rates from a private seller. We came from a ranking of eighty-seventh in 1924 to second in 1936, in the poor man's group for cities over 100,000."

Representative Pierce also charged on the floor of the House that improper taxation was "robbing" the District of $2,000,000 taxes a year from Pepco.

To this the commissioner replied: "Congress fixes the rate of taxation on Pepco, not the Utilities Commission. If they don't pay enough taxes, that is a matter for Congress to correct. As it is, 13 cents out of every dollar a consumer pays on his light bill goes to the Government for taxes. The average over the country is 14 cents."

End of Strike By Painters Is Believed Near

Settlement of the painters' strike on all Washington construction contracted by the Treasury appeared nearer yesterday as the Labor Department opened efforts to conciliate the controversy.

Union painters on non-Treasury jobs were back at work yesterday, following a brief general walkout, and officials of the union reportedly promised Howard T. Colvin, Labor Department conciliator, that the strike would not be spread beyond Treasury projects pending further attempts at settlement.

Outstanding developments yesterday were:

Bennett F. Schauffler, fifth regional director of the National Labor Relations Board with headquarters in Baltimore, launched an investigation of charges lodged by Harry S. Wender, counsel for the painters' local. Wender accused the William Wilson Co., of Atlanta, of barring union painters on its job, contracted by the Treasury, in the Internal Revenue building.

Peace Talk Planned.

Colvin, according to Wender, telegraphed a request to Wilson in Atlanta to come to Washington for a peace talk.

Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of the striking local, pledged that the walkout will be confined to the Archives, Internal Revenue and other Treasury-contracted buildings while conciliators attempt to iron out the question. Nor will there be sympathy strikes, at least for the time being, by the six allied building trades unions which are giving the painters their moral support.

The painters' complaint is that the Wilson company, along with the Coons-Raptis company which holds a Treasury contract to paint the city postoffice, is violating both the Bacon-Davis act and the National labor relations act. Holcombe and Wender accuse the two firms of discriminating against union men and working their painters eight hours a day on straight pay, whereas the union is bound to a seven-hour day.

No General Strike.

Approximately 75 glaziers, in sympathy with the painters, have struck on the same jobs. Also supporting the union's demands to compel the two contractors to hire organized workmen and observe the seven-hour-day rule are the following trades, according to Holcombe:

Plasterers, iron workers, cement finishers, hoisting engineers, carpenters and elevator constructors.

John Locher, executive secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council, yesterday said his organization is giving "moral support" to the painters, a member union, although it is not yet willing to sanction a general strike.

Extend D. C. Hangar.

Bishop Grace Asks Restudy Of $1,711 U. S. Income Levy

Colored Cleric, Who Claims Prayers of Himself and 200,000 Followers Stopped Ethiopian War, Argues Errors Made in Allowances.

Bishop Charles M. (Daddy) Grace, who last year claimed that he and his 200,000 colored followers had stopped the Ethiopian war by prayer, yesterday made an appeal to Uncle Sam to reconsider an income tax assessment against him.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue says that Bishop Grace owes $1,711 on his 1934 and 1935 income taxes. The evangelist, who maintains 85 houses of prayer along the Atlantic Seaboard, yesterday asked the Board of Tax Appeals to redetermine the deficiency.

Bishop Grace, whose mass baptisms here are familiar to movie audiences, contended that the Bureau of Internal Revenue erred in disallowing $11,027 which he deducted as "tithes and offerings" to the "Church of the Rock," of which he is head.

He argued that the bureau also erred in disallowing $9,785 he deducted for gifts and in including in his taxable income $2,107 he reported as rents, literature and "601 M street."

The bishop makes his headquarters at the M street address. His home is a palatial 17-room house at 1 Logan Circle. Here, in May of last year, he told a reporter how he and his followers stopped the Ethiopian war through prayer.

Last November Bishop Grace told police here that his life had been threatened and asked for protection. He said he began receiving anonymous threats after he had been in Philadelphia campaigning for President Roosevelt.

There were some, however, who believed that the threats might have come from Philadelphia evangelists whose flocks began to dwindle once the magnetic Bishop Grace appeared on the scene.

Dr. Francis Happy Because Illness Supports Theory

A baby tick bit him and put him in bed for a week, but Dr. Edward Francis was happy last night because the bite gave him not only relapsing fever, but evidence that his theories about the disease are correct.

"Doing all right," he told The Post by telephone from his bed in Marine Hospital, Baltimore, where he went from his research laboratory at the National Institute of Health.

"I'll be out soon and back on the job," the 65-year-old Washington microbe hunter, a hospital patient since last Saturday, said in a shaky voice. He laughingly reminded that the United States brand of relapsing fever is rarely fatal, though it is quite a nuisance.

Genial, friendly "Eddie" Francis had been investigating the tick that causing relapsing fever for nearly seven years when, one day last month, he was accidentally bitten. His illness followed, indicating that the spiral-shaped germ borne by the tick, which causes relapsing fever, can be transmitted through one or more generations of the tick and that the progeny can infect a human being as well as their parents.

"It was one of those infants that got me," Dr. Francis said. "Newly hatched ticks are almost invisible and they're hard to keep track of. One of them got into the webbing between the little and ring fingers of my left hand. I didn't even know he was there until after I'd been bitten."

Portion of Fleet Plans Soviet Call

During the summer and early fall Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, U. S. N., commander in chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, will visit Vladivostok, Kobe and Yokohama, Japan, the Navy Department announced last night.

This will be the first visit by an American squadron to a Russian Asiatic port since the coast gunboat Sacramento wintered in Siberian waters in 1922 while protecting American interests in the Far East.

The Augusta and the destroyer squadron will arrive at Vladivostok July 28 and depart four days later, naval officials said. The ships will call at Yokohama September 20 and leave for Kobe ten days later. They will remain there from October 1 to October 8.

Md. Tax Board Opposes Move To Annapolis

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 23.—The State tax commission today protested proposed transfer of its offices from Baltimore to the new State Office Building in Annapolis.

Harry O. Levin, chairman of the commission, said "we feel the board of public works is sufficiently acquainted with the functions of this commission to fully realize a change in its offices from Baltimore to Annapolis would be little short of a public calamity."

The reasons set forth in Chairman Levin's letter to Joseph O'C. McCusker, secretary to the board of public works, included:

"The commission is the legal custodian of all corporate records in the State and, as such, requires more than 10,000 corporations to report annually and to pay annual tax. These corporations, for the most part, are located in Baltimore City and are represented by Baltimore lawyers or local citizens."

"We have no hesitancy in saying that at least 90 per cent of all their charters, amendments, stock issuance statements and articles of dissolution are filed by lawyers of Baltimore City. At least 95 per cent of the inquiries received concerning corporate matters are from local lawyers and citizens.

"We would estimate that on an average day 50 citizens from Baltimore City call in person at these offices for information of one kind or another. As to inquiries made over the telephone, it would be impossible for us to estimate the number of these, but we assure you they run into large numbers.

"In addition to the corporate functions of this commission, we are obliged to hear appeals on property assessments made by the local authorities. In the past four years ending January 1, 1937, the commission heard and disposed of more than 7,500 appeals filed from the action of the Appeals Tax Court of Baltimore City. During the corresponding period of time, less than 200 appeals were filed from the various counties."

Half of Employes Own Homes.

Annapolis, July 23 (AP).—An analysis of questionnaires submitted to the board of public works, in connection with the proposed State office building here, today showed 56.7 per cent of the State employes are homeowners.

Field Glasses Used In Civil War Taken From Parked Car

A pair of field glasses his uncle used in the Civil War was stolen yesterday from the parked automobile of William W. Stone, of McLean, Va.

The theft occurred near the bottling plant where Stone works, at Twelfth and M streets southeast. The thief also got a fountain pen.

Stone said his relative had worn Confederate gray in the Virginia campaigns, and bought the field glasses for $75 in 1861. They were passed on to him, with their history and tradition no greater than their usefulness. He carried them with him most of the time he was driving, he told police.

Miss Perkins Cites Wage Law Needs

Atlantic City, N. J., July 23 (AP).—Secretary Perkins said tonight that wage cutting in the cotton-garment industry after NRA's collapse illustrated the need for wage and hour legislation.

Speaking before the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the Labor Department chief said:

"In the cotton-garment industry, where women constitute the vast majority of employes, it was found by the Bureau of Labor Statistics that a year after the NRA went out those plants that had cut wages about 37 per cent or more had increased the volume of their business by 60 per cent and the number of their employes by 34 per cent.

"Within the year the average weekly earnings of workers in these plants decreased from $10.88 to $8.23. In the same period the cotton-garment firms included in this study which did not cut wages showed a decrease in the volume of their business."

A drive for organization of District citizens in a campaign to obtain the vote in the District was launched by nearly 100 individuals last night in a meeting at the board room of the District Building. They empowered their chairman, Wilbur S. Lynch, to select a committee and draft an organization plan for "complete enfranchisement as American citizens of all bona fide residents of the District of Columbia, now disenfranchised."

The resolution drafted by William A. Maio, president of the Southeast Citizens Association was adopted almost unanimously by the gathering, many of them representatives of business groups and other District organiaztions.

The resolution named the group as the District of Columbia Suffrage Association and outlined its first effort of the group as "the enactment by Congress though its present power of exclusive legislation over the District of Columbia of an enabling act by which District citizens will be given an official voice in the conduct of their local affairs.

Temporarily the gathering split wide open over an amendment to the resolution proposing that they seek an amendment to the Constitution to provide the vote. John Paul Jones, of the Georgetown Businessmen's Association, author of the amendment, believed that a vote in local affairs would prove useless unless it were obtained simultaneously with District representation in Congress.

The amendment was voted down, 30 to 18, with many of the group not voting, on the objection it would make for conflict with the work of the present National Representation Committee of the District.

Fast Film Play, Faster Tennis Earle Features

"MIDNIGHT MADONNA." Paramount picturization of a story by David Boehm, adapted to the screen by Doris Malloy and Gladys Lehman, featuring Warren William, Mady Correll and Baby Kitty Clancy, with Edward Ellis, Jonathan Hale, Joseph Crehan, Irene Franklin, Jack Clifford, Donald Kirke, Nick Copeland, Harry Tyler, Brooks Benedict, Joseph Sawyer and Ruth Robinson. Directed by James Flood. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater by Mary Harris.

There's a sporting atmosphere, brisk and snappy, about both stage and screen at the Earle.

In "Midnight Madonna" there is a jolly clatter of galloping dominoes, pony betting and fancy poker playing in competition with the mother love motif.

On the stage you'll see some of the hottest table tennis playing of strictly championship caliber. Table tennis (we used to call it ping-pong) is no game for sissies and the marvelous shots of Ruth Hughes Aarons and Viktor Barna kept the audience pop-eyed and so silent that you could hear a piece of cellophane drop. A week or so ago the Earle brought champion skaters to its stage, and with the advent of the table tennis aces, we're wondering hopefully if the management won't produce a rassling festival.

While "Midnight Madonna" is not important celluloid, it is more entertaining than many of the much-heralded opuses. It benefits by smart and fast-paced direction, good acting and lavish atmosphere. You will have a good time while seeing it, a good time undiluted by even one draggy second.

Is Splendidly Cast.

Warren William should step back up by several notches because of "Midnight Madonna." He has been the victim of a couple of bits of unfortunate casting and direction. But here he is cast just right, as the gambler with the heart of gold, plenty tough and perhaps not altogether a right guy, but still a good guy. He plays it as smartly as he is supposed to fill an inside straight.

Tiny Kitty Clancy, heralded as another "baby star," is a noble tiny tot. She's vaguely reminiscent of Shirley Temple when Shirley was so little, but not quite so pretty. But this is all to the good, since she is such an endearing bit of babyhood, sweet and roly-poly, and just like everybody's pet baby.

Mady Correll, attractive and a fine young actress, completes the roundup of featured people. But just as important as anyone else, except Warren William, is that splendid senior actor, Edward Ellis, playing the judge who decides whether little Kitty shall go to her father or mother.

The story has big moments, all essentially modern, since it revolves about the custody of a child of alienated parents. The mother is a night club singer, driven to solicit money from a passerby for her sick child's medicine. The father is a waster, whose father leaves millions to his little grandchild, knowing the worthlessness of his own son. The action centers in which is to have guardianship of the child, with lying witnesses testifying to the mother's character or lack of character. But all these low-down folks, by slightly extra-legal methods, are brought to book. It's good fun though a bit incredible.

That Table Tennis.

Table tennis, already referred to, takes the top in the stage show. Next comes the Condos Brothers, tap dancers, whom you may have seen in various pictures. They are even better in person.

For buxom fun and some good singing, the trio of Forsythe, Seamon and Farrell contribute an oversize quota. Tommy Trent and his puppets, especially the trucking darky, figure pleasantly. Enrico and Novello, one blondely graceful and the other darkly appealing, offer a pattern of dances, ranging from the tango to the shag, that add the final bright color to a generous stage show. And the always pretty Audrey Sieber wears her prettiest frocks of the season, two frostily lovely satins in white and blue-green.

There's also a Charley Chase short, "Calling All Doctors," that will reconcile you to aspirin. The newsreel, which should be so dependable, is a bit uninspired.

Columbia.

Spy Powell and Spy Rainer match wits over a pair of candlesticks which have a secret compartment, in this rather rococo tale of intrigue-in-the-days-of-the-Czars.

Rainer, with the grime of "The Good Earth" removed, wears the jewels, gowns and gestures of a Russian countess. Powell discards his "Thin Man" cocktails and imbibes the wines of a Polish baron.

Technically enemies, they carry on a subtly light flirtation while trying to get possession of the candlesticks. To Budapest, Paris and London they go, with the candlesticks changing hands at a dizzy rate. They are auctioned, stolen, sold, finally secured by the imperturable spies, who discover the secrets both are trying to conceal.

Rainer's mission is to secure the death of Powell, who is a member of the Polish Nationalist Party; Powell's is to secure the release of an imprisoned countryman.

Love triumphs once more and the Czar frees them. How they came to get in the Czar's power is something we coyly suggest you see the picture to discover.

Oh, yes, Maureen O'Sullivan and Robert Young perform the young-love duet which is a tender obligato to the main theme of unacknowledged mature love.

Hongkong is the subject of the colored Fitzpatrick travel film, which is presented in the rather boresome manner of all the Fitzpatrick travelogues. Herman Fineberg, jr., and Pat Rooney, jr., knock off a few good tap dances in an in-ept little short. The newsreel contains shots of Prof. Piccard's balloons in ascension. The audience murmured as one man, "Why! They look like g-r-apes!"

Actress Converts Swim Suit Cleverly

Crowds Flock to Loew's Capitol to See Jean Harlow; 'Easy Living' Is Hilarious Farce on Palace Screen

"SARATOGA." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original screen play by Anita Loos and Robert Hopkins, co-starring Jean Harlow and Clark Gable, with Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan, Walter Pidgeon, Una Merkel, Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards, Hattie McDaniels and Frankie Darro. Directed by Jack Conway. Previewed Tuesday, July 20.

Whatever anxiety may have been felt over the posthumous release of Jean Harlow's last picture was quickly dispelled yesterday when turn-away crowds flocked to Loew's Capitol Theater from opening hour until closing to witness "Saratoga," in which Clark Gable is the costar. Yesterday's attendance shattered all previous house records, exceeding last New Year's first day of "After the Thin Man" by approximately 600 paid admissions.

BELL.

This was a deserved tribute to the memory of a brilliant young actress whose utimely death shocked the world. At the outset, it should be said that those who attend the Capitol this week merely to see Miss Harlow for the last time will find her perfectly cast in an excellent picture which affords both her and the stalwart Mr. Gable roles expertly fashioned to their measure.

"Saratoga" is a fast-moving and, at times, genuinely exciting comedy-romance of the race tracks, the breeding farms of thoroughbreds and the other haunts of those who "follow the horses" either for profit or as an expensive pleasure. The action is initiated by an attempted foreclosure of the breeding establishment presided over by Grandpa Clayton, whose love of horseflesh outweighs his business acumen. He is rescued from his plight by the intercession in his behalf of Duke Bradley, king of the bookmakers, who will cover any bet up to a quarter of a million.

Carol Goes "High Hat."

In the meantime, Carol Clayton, granddaughter of the old horse breeder, has become betrothed in Europe to Hartley Madison, a rich broker, who always has been able to "take" Bradley for large sums of money on the races. She returns to America with many new notions of social values and more than a touch of superiority. Upon the death of her father in the excitement of a close race, Duke steps in as a sort of guardian angel to protect both the rights of Grandpa Clayton and the romantic interests of his granddaughter. He plans to use Carol as a means of enticing Madison back to the betting ring and shaking him down for fabulous sums of money. There begins then a war of wits that culminates in Carol's falling in love with the man she has pretended to hate and tossing into the discard the gold-plated young fellow with whom she had thought she was in love.

Such is the skeleton of a story that extends its activities far beyond the scope of any such skimpy outline. There are scenes aboard a Florida "race special" that are high-pitched and amusing and still an integral part of the play's romantic developments. There are also some thrilling races run on metropolitan and Southern tracks that will raise the hair of the habituated devotee of the grandstands and paddocks. The running of the big race that marks the climax of the story—with hundreds of thousands of dollars on Duke's books—is one of the most effective bits of blood-tingling drama ever caught by the cameras. The finish is so close that the result cannot be posted until the films of a "photographic finish" have been developed and thrown upon a screen in the office of the track officials—the cinema's first utilization of this device for creating suspense.

A Superlative Cast.

Gable, as the bookmaker, and Jean Harlow, as Carol, as has been said, are cast in roles ideally suited to their distinctive capabilities. Miss Harlow plays with her customary asperity and never looked lovelier. It is still my conviction that if word had not got out that a "double" had to be used in some of the scenes Miss Harlow did not live to complete, no one in the audience ever would have suspected the substitution of Mary Dees for the star in a few brief scenes in the final sequences of the film. Gable is a robust and breezy Duke Bradley, with Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards as his sheet-writer, and Walter Pidgeon quite fulfills the requirements of the more aloof part of Madison, who finally is relieved of his roll.

Comedy is interjected throughout the length of the picture by that admirable exponent of the uncompleted speech, Frank Morgan, and Una Merkel, cast as his independent wife with an infinite capacity for doing the wrong thing at the wrong time. Hattie McDaniels, that abundant Negro actress, scores effectively on the comedy side as Miss Harlow's maid. Lionel Barrymore is the irascible Grandpa Clayton and executes the part with his usual skill. Everything, in fact, conspires to make "Saratoga" a brisk and engaging entertainment.

Stage Show Clicks.

Serving his third week as chief comic and master of ceremonies at the Capitol, Red Skelton presides over one of the theater's better vaudeville bills. The costar of this portion of the program is Gus Van, the surviving half of the team of Van and Schenck, who has lost none of his finesse as a singer of songstories. He stopped the second performance yesterday afternoon with such numbers as "Who Stole My Gal Away?" "Broadway," interweaving a considerable number of his past song hits; "Mussolini" and "Did Your Mother Come From Ireland?" Red is all over the place in a series of his most effective comedy skits. What a worker!

Others on the bill include Carter and Holmes, knockabout comedians and dancers, the Gae Foster Girls, also held over, in one of whose numbers Dorothy Crooker again demonstrates the perfection of coordination by doing her entire dance on one foot with the other continuously and, one would guess, exhaustingly, off the floor.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's overture augment a feature that stands as a fitting monument to the talent and charm of an actress the cinema could ill afford to lose.

Shares Honors With Jean Harlow

Although slightly obscured in the public mind by the presence of the late Jean Harlow in the cast, Clark Gable does his full share as co-star of "Saratoga," which yesterday broke all attendance records at Loew's Capitol Theater. This is the last picture in which Miss Harlow appeared and packed the house continuously yesterday from opening until close. Gable appears as Duke Bradley, biggest of the bookmakers following the big-time tracks.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 23.—Last night, having nothing better to do, I was weeding out my collection of old stills—on-the-set photographs that have been piling up in my files for years. And I suddenly realized what it is that I have been missing on the screen. What has happened to our great comedians? Why do the studios no longer turn out two-reel, side-splitting howlers? I am homesick for a good big belly laugh—I want to let down my hair, roll up my sleeves, forget all about sophistication and subtlety and "roll in the aisles" while some clown skids down a flight of stairs. And, unless I miss my guess, a lot of you folks share my plebian appetite.

LAUREL AND HARDY.

Hollywood producers are suffering from delusions of grandeur—they want to make super-epics with million-dollar casts and deluxe sets. They seem to think that a two-reel comedy is beneath their dignity. Maybe it is—but I am not dignified when I laugh, and how I used to hold my sides when Lloyd Hamilton, Snub Pollard, Fatty Arbuckle, Harry Langdon and Laurel and Hardy acted the fool. Hollywood, trying to hinge comedy on involved plots, has failed to develop one outstanding comedian in the last five years. All screen funny men do in today's pictures is to provide "comedy relief," and it usually detracts from the plot and gets only a mild chuckle instead of a real honest-to-goodness bellow.

I think this industry needs another Mack Sennett—someone who is smart enough to say "To hell with sophistication and logic—let's have some fun!"

Talked with the mother of Billy and Bobby Mauch, those 12-year-old identical twins who played in "The Prince and the Pauper," and she told me that the boys had frequently traded roles during the production of that picture without the director ever being aware of the hoax. "They've always been great practical jokers," she said, "and I'm sure that I am the only person who can tell them apart. You see, I know that Bobby wears a ring with a setting; Billy wears a plain band ring."

I asked her how she can be positive that they have never swapped rings—and I left her looking quite worried.

I visited a Warner Brothers set for a between-scenes chat with Olivia de Havilland, and imagine my surprise when that minx, after managing a minor facial contortion, thrust out her tongue and displayed on its tip a row of five perfect teeth. "Do that again!" I gasped, and she obliged with the nonchalance of a professional magician—first I saw them, then I saw them not. "They're just porcelain caps," she explained. "You see, my own teeth are slightly irregular—when they're photographed in a crosslight the ones that protrude cast shadows on the others. So the studio sent me to a specialist who does nothing but manufacture these caps for screen players. If you think star salaries are high, you should see his price list!"

Metropolitan

Dick Powell has one of his best singing roles in "The Singing Marine," which yesterday took possession of the screen at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, following an earlier successful week at the Earle. The star's singing, however, is not all this film has to commend it to those in quest of light musical entertainment.

A sufficiently logical story is unspun during course of the action to string the solo numbers and ensembles together satisfactorily and there is a wealth of comedy scattered around amongst the goings-on. The gist of the thing is that a young Marine with a voice achieves success on the radio and becomes the envy of all his company. Just as he is about to launch himself on a richly remunerative sponsored program on the air, his command is ordered to China. He even broadcasts from there, under circumstances that are unusual, to say the least—all the time piling up the hatred of his fellow service men. He brings things out right side up in the end by doing his one good deed for that "hitch" and everything is lovely—as it should be in musical comedy.

Doris Weston appears opposite the star in the principal feminine role and makes a fine impression both by her acting and the charm of her voice. Hugh Herbert romps away with the comedy honors in one of his funniest roles and Allen Jenkins and Lee Dixon are the spearhead of the opposition.

The ensembles are staged with an opulent disregard of both cost and probability, but afford Lee Dixon an opportunity to introduce one of his most agile dances, so the incongruity may be forgiven. An able supporting cast appears in the lesser roles.

Taylor Rescues Miss Stanwyck From Policeman

Hollywood, July 23 (AP).—Barbara Stanwyck, mistaken for an autograph hunter, got "the works" from a policeman—and was rescued by Robert Taylor—at the preview of her newest film last night.

She wore an old hat, pulled down on her head, and her coat collar was flipped up so the officer who shoved back autograph hunters swarming around Taylor, her escort, shoved her, too. When Taylor got through the mob, he found it was a strange young woman who had hold of his coat tail. He rushed out again. Miss Stanwyck sat weeping on the curb, guarded by the law.

"I'm going to sock you if you don't let her go," threatened Taylor. The policeman did. Miss Stanwyck suffered bruises on her arms and shoulders.

From Honor Cast.

Marjorie Lord, Dark-haired ingenue of the Pulitzer Prize play, "The Old Maid," is cast as a country girl in "Hideaway," who yearns for the big city but eventually finds romance at home. Fred Stone is starred in the exciting film.

Arnold and Arthur Stars of Luxurious Comedy With Fine Cast.

"EASY LIVING." Paramount picturization of a story by Vera Caspary, adapted to the screen by Preston Sturges, co-starring Edward Arnold and Jean Arthur, with Ray Milland, Mary Nash, Luis Alberni, Franklin Pangborn, William Demarest, Andrew Tombes, William B. Davidson and Robert Greig. Directed by Mitchell Leisen. Previewed Wednesday, July 21. At Loew's Palace.

The transition of a penniless office girl, one week in arrears for her $7 per week room, to the imperial suite in the most swagger hotel in New York may be said to epitomize the utterly ridiculous developments revealed in this completely insane comedy.

It does not at all, however, epitomize the wealth of extravagant byplay, the fantastic confusion of identities, the raid on the stock market by a small-time broker, who almost upsets the apple cart; the gradual sprouting of romance in the plot or the hilarious devices by which a final adjustment is brought about. "Easy Living" is a riot of exaggerated action and situations that keep an audience in a continuous state of limp exhaustion from laughing.

Mr. J. B. Ball is one of the Broad street wolves who hold a hammerlock on "the street." He wallows in wealth and yet pinches pennies while overlooking the millions. His son displeases him and strams out of the palace in which they live in as pretty a huff as anyone would care to see. His wife irritates him because she has bought her steenth sable coat at an exorbitant figure. The coat—when he finally can get his hands on it—he flings out the window onto the head of the office girl riding on a bus top to work. When she attempts to return the magnificent wrap, he makes her a present of it and also purchases her a hat to match. And that's what started all of the hilarious mischief that constitutes the remainder of the film.

Enter Romance.

Mary Smith is fired from her job on suspicion of indiscretion when she barges in with the sables on. She then responds to the overtures of a bankrupt hotel proprietor, who has heard of the hat purchase and suspects the coat and wishes some means of compelling Ball to ease up on his overdue notes. If Mary will only accept the imperial suite at $7 a week, he thinks his problem will be solved. It was, after a fashion, for when Mary is made a party to the destruction by a handsome young man of the automat where she goes to dine on a dime, she suggests that he come with her to the Hotel Louis. The handsome young man, of course, is the junior Ball.

Then Mrs. Ball decamps in quest of a Florida divorce and "J. B." registers in at the Louis, an item that is spread all over town by a gossip columnist. From that point on, "Easy Living" also is easy laughing.

The cast is one from which a casual pictureqoer hardly would expect such high-power comedy performances. Edward Arnold appears in the role of Ball and Jean Arthur is the working girl whom Heaven almost forgets to protect. They are perfect foils for each other, and Ray Milland, as John Ball, jr., also comes in for his fair share of praise for what is definitely one of his best screen portrayals. His wrecking of the automat is a bit of slapstick low comedy that will not soon be forgotten, if for no other reason than that it seems to be a feeder for a hospital. Mary Nash, as Mrs. Ball, has not too much to do, but does that little skillfully and well.

Comedians Galore.

That expert dialectician, Luis Alberni, as Louis Louis, proprietor of the Hotel Louis—which becomes suddenly packed with moneyed climbers when it is bruited about that J. B. Ball is stopping there—is one of the comedy mainstays of the picture. So are Franklin Pangborn, as the ladylike owner of a women's shop; William Demarest, as the columnist; Andrew Tombes, as the chiseling broker, and Robert Greig, again a ponderous and pungently humorous butler.

The settings throughout are in the ultra-ultra manner of the very rich. Luxury exudes from every inch of the film, except the brief glimpses of Mary's meager boarding-house bedroom. The photography is highly artistic and in every way "Easy Living" has been made a "class" production. Mitchell Leisen's direction is paced to the gait of a hurricane. Even the pair of shaggy sheep dogs turn out to be cyclonic actors.

Walt Disney "Symphony" Revue.

The picture ends on the same note with which it began. Mr. and Mrs. Ball are having another squabble over the sable coat when he snatches it and hurls it over the balcony upon the head of Marsha Hunt. It is at this juncture that Miss Arthur speaks the classic tag-line of the play to Ray Milland: "Come on, let's go, this is where we came in!"

A novelty is presented as an extra added screen attraction at the Palace this week in "Walt Disney's Academy Award Revue," a symposium of five of the best of his "Silly Symphonies" upon which the Academy award was based. Among them one seems certain to encounter his favorite among the Disney releases of last year in this series.

The picturized "Events of the Day" is the only other auxiliary of a bill that was made to order for those who have not forgotten how to laugh.

AMUSEMENTS

ANGELO HERNDON: Your brother, Milton Herndon, is in Spain now—fighting for the loyalists. And so many other members of your race are in the same battalion, fighting against the Italian Fascists, to avenge the defeat in Ethiopia . . . Austin Parker: That valet you had for one day, who had been recommended to you by Miriam Hopkins, really is the Earl of Warwick!

• • • •

A. S. C. A. P.: Arthur Schwartz, one of your ace songwriters, has had a remarkable experience with his song, "You and the Night and the Music." He wrote it first for "Revenge With Music," where it was sung by Libby Holman. Then, when he went to England, he sold it to Herbert Wilcox, producer at B. I. P., to be used as a musical background for "Nel Gwynne." Schwartz again sold it to C. B. Cochran, who used it in his revue, "Stop Press," the British version of "As Thousands Cheer." Wilcox attended the premiere of that show, met Schwartz in the lobby, said he liked that song—and bought it again!

ALFRED A. KNOPF: That's an excellent title Harvey Fergusson has in his new novel which you just published, "The Life of Riley." It shatters another dream of Ed Reilly's. The criminal lawyer who defended Hauptmann and who now is confined in a sanitarium told me many moths ago that he was writing his autobiography and was using that title . . . Francis Lederer: Columbia Films is having a lot of fun with your new picture. First they called it "Thanks for Nothing," changed it to "Thanks for Everything," which now has been changed to "It's All Yours" . . . Lew Ambers: Clifford Odet's friends insist that the leading character in his new prize fight play resembles you very much.

VAUDEVILLE ARTISTS Association: Just before the match between Groucho Marx-Ellsworth Vines and Charlie Chaplin-Fred Perry, Groucho and Perry were volleying. The comic managed to return a difficult shot, which Perry killed. When Groucho gloomily retired to the back court, Walter Connolly consoled him: "That's okay, kid. At least you got next-to-closing."

• • • •

JOHN BARRYMORE: Here's one of the reasons why the radio stations have rushed to present so many Shakespeare broadcasts. There were reports of an investigation of the networks—which immediately hastened the cultural touch . . . Buddy Ebsen: Your sister and one-time dancing partner, Vilma Ebsen, expects you to practice some new steps with her before she goes into the new Shubert musical with a new dance partner. And so if you think you'll merely vacation here, prepare to work . . . Will Hays: Jane Pickens, who has won a Juilliard opera award, turned down that screen offer which would have cast her as "a bad girl."

• • • •

DARRYL ZANUCK: Mack Gordon, of Gordon & Revel, who will write the score for your new Simone Simon picture, "Love and Hisses," reproached Art Arthur, who wrote the movie story.. "That's a helluva title you picked," Gordon complained. "How can a guy write a theme song called 'Love and Hisses'?" . . . "G'wan, it's a cinch," Arthur replied. "First you thrilled me, then you chilled me—and take it from there!"

• • • •

SAM GOLDWYN: Alva Johnston, who wrote "The Great Goldwyn," interviewed one of the country's most famous financiers, with a view toward writing his biography. "What do you want me to tell you—the truth or boloney?" the financier asked. Johnston replied: "Whichever comes naturally" . . . Mrs. Brad Dresser: Your first husband, the middle-aged Prince Rospigliosi, is still puzzled about your two subsequent marriages—to the retiring Louis Reed and husky Brad Dresser. He can't understand how a girl like you, barely 20 years old, could have selected three such different types of men for husbands . . . Mary Brian: In your new picture, you'll support the star, Mitzi Green. Mitzi, as a baby actress, supported you in your first starring film.

• • • •

MAX REINHARDT: Those huge columns you ordered for the Solomon's Temple scene in "The Eternal Road" still lie unused in the basement. They were supposed to crumble onstage, and then be cleared away in 20 seconds, in time for the next scen. You wantd the columns so large it was impossible to get them into the theater. And after the first tumble, in rehearsal, it took—not 20 seconds—but three days to reassemble them!

Trans-Lux

Time hits a high gallop at the Trans-Lux this week. And news mixes a queer, but exciting, brew, with pictorial comment on the final highlight in the Supreme Court battle as the most timely of events.

The "March of Time" is all American. The philantropies of the Rockefellers, the defense importance to the United States of Hawaii and the national menace of orphans and their purchase on the baby market present three phases of national life that are in frightening contrast.

Mickey Mouse introduces a baby elephant for plenty of laughs, and a special short "Rhythm in Light" is as fantastic a camera-musical study as you would care to see.

Sports lead the list of news activities, with summer skiing on straw runways the novelty of the season. Tommy Farr arrives to battle Joe Louis; New York youngsters get a private playground; the Ryder Cup winners come home; Milady sees what's new in velvets and shoes; motorcycles speed up at Bond, N. Y.; Henry Cotton becomes world golf champ; Naval Academy kiddies take to the pools, and two race classics pour fast action into the camera for a sporting finish.

News skips around the world—from Moscow, where the Russians are following their fliers and Stalin kisses them when they come home, to Italy, where the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Roosevelt, is seeing the sights, on through France for the Eucharistic Congress. Tribute is cinematically paid to the late Marconi and James Cardinal Gibbons.

Budge, Parker Selected to Meet English in Davis Cup Singles Today

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1937 13

Americans Favored to Regain Cup

Parker Faces Austin in Initial Match; Budge to Oppose Hare.

By Scotty Reston.

Wimbledon, England, July 23 (AP).—Don Budge and Frankie Parker, undistinguished grammar school kids when the United States last held the Davis Cup, will stride out on Wimbledon's center court tomorrow for the first two singles matches of the challenge round against Great Britain's Charles Edgar Hare and Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin.

Unsuccessful challengers six times since Rene Lacoste and Henri Cochet carried off the trophy at Germantown in 1927, the American team was favored so heavily there wasn't a London bookmaker accepting bets.

Even today's draw smiled on the challengers. It generally was conceded that Great Britain's only chance, however remote, was for the veteran Austin to get a chance to play Budge on the first day. Instead they were drawn to face one another on Tuesday.

Youngest Player.

Parker, youngest player ever named to represent the United States in the challenge round, faces Austin in the opening match at 2:30 p. m. (8:30 a. m. Eastern standard). Budge, approaching the end of one of the most triumphant invasions in Wimbledon's long history, meets the left-handed Hare when Parker and Austin finish.

Budge and Mako will team up in the doubles Monday against Clifford Raymond Davys Tuckey and Frank Herbert David Wilde. For the finale Tuesday, tomorrow's singles pairings will be reversed with Parker meeting Hare and Budge playing Austin in that order.

Not even the substitution of Parker for Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant could be classed as a surprise when the rival captains named their squads for the series that every critic believes will see the cup returning to America. This had been foreshadowed last Tuesday when Grant was trounced by Heinrich Henkel, suffered his second defeat of the interzone finals and endangered America's cup hopes until the lion-hearted Budge saved the day with his thrilling five-set victory over Baron Gottfried von Cramm.

Calls Self "Yellow."

Grant, accusing himself of turning "yellow," declared then he would not play in the challenge round even if named to the team.

America's team, as is perhaps the youngest in the history of Davis Cup competition. Budge is the "old-timer" at 22. Mako and Parker both are 21, but the latter is the younger of the two by a single week.

It is a paradox that this United States team, made up mostly of the youngsters who were eliminated a year ago in the North American zone finals by Australia, should be not only favored but the toast of all London.

Even if Fred Perry, now a professional, should come bounding out on the center court tomorrow, it is doubtful if the British would be picked over what Londoners are calling "America's three war babies."

Though in the end the draw is likely to favor the United States, it is calculated to defer final decision until Tuesday. Austin was good enough to defeat Frank Shields in 1934, Wilmer Allison in 1935 and Jack Crawford in 1936 in opening challenge round matches and will be the general choice to add Parker to that list.

If he does, Budge will do no more than tie up the score by beating the 22-year-old Hare and leave it up to the doubles teams to settle which nation is going to take a 2-1 advantage into the final day of play Tuesday.

Austin Is Good.

It's a mistake, however, to underestimate the graceful, dark-complexioned Austin. In 1935, the last time the United States was in the challenge round, he whipped Allison in five sets and Budge in four, and in 1934 he not only took Shields but Sidney Wood as well.

Three weeks before his thirty-first birthday, Bunny no longer has the stamina he once had but his backhand still is a powerful weapon and early in the battle he's a close match for anybody.

Hare, ranked fourth in Great Britain, went to the finals of the all-England doubles with Wilde in 1936, but few believe he has anything like the equipment necessary to give Budge or any other top-notch internationalist a real battle.

British experts now have given up trying to figure out ways whereby the British can win, but they have assured a good crowd by pointing out it may be a long time before another Davis Cup challenge round is held at Wimbledon.

British Hopes Low.

Tonight it appeared improbable that Great Britain could count seriously upon scoring more than 1 point—Austin's probable victory over Parker. Budge, of course, figures to whip both Hare and Austin, and Parker will be the choice over the former.

With the withdrawal because of illness of George Patrick Hughes, the British hardly can hope to do more than make a creditable showing in the doubles. Tuckey is one of the world's foremost doubles players, but he has had little time to work with Wilde as a partner. Budge and Mako, on the other hand, have improved tremendously since last year that they won the All-England championship and whipped Von Cramm and Henkel in the interzone finals.

Thus America finally seems to have come to the end of its long campaign to return the international trophy to the United States.

Elon Hogsett Holds Griffs to 5 Safeties

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, July 23.—The Nats muffed a chance to gain on the league-leading Yankees, who are only 22½ games ahead, and also saw their proud one-game winning streak end abruptly when the Browns beat 'em this afternoon.

The Browns didn't exactly luck out against the Nats. They beat 'em rather decisively, 8 to 0, in fact, which is as it should be when one club makes 18 hits and the other collects only 5, as the Nats did.

The Washingtons, who reformed suddenly in Chicago the other day and won a ball game that broke a ten-game losing streak, reverted to the evil tenor of their ways this afternoon and were a beaten ball club as early as the second inning, when the rehabilitated Browns put on a five-run stampede against the Nats' best pitcher, Monte Weaver.

Old Elon Hogsett, who pitched for the Browns, wasn't content to make the 5-to-0 lead stand up. He made it roll over and do tricks, and when the finish came the Nats had only five hits off old Mr. Hogsett and no runs at all.

And, in the last eight ininngs, if you must know, the Nats only got two runners as far as second base and none at all as far as third. That was the way Hogsett was pitching this afternoon and—it might be added—the way the Nats were hitting.

The closest the Washingtons came to scoring was in the first inning when Buddy Lewis reached third after a cheap single and was tagged out at the plate when he tried to score on Simmons' hot smash to Knickerbocker.

Then the Browns, who are taking themselves seriously under the new management of Jim Bottomly, being full of vim and vinegar and everything, especially after knocking off the Yankees yesterday, went out and won the ball game.

Weaver got the first man out in the second inning but the next man out was Weaver himself. By that time nine Browns had been to bat in the inning.

All of a sudden, Weaver, who had pitched very acceptably in the opening inning, began throwing a new kind of delivery—a rightfield scram ball.

It went scramming into right for a double by Beau Bell and then it scooted into rightfield for a single by Bill Knickerbocker. Rollie Hemsley bashed it to right for a double and immediately after, Tom Carey hit it to right for a single.

And then, old Mr. Hogsett, of all people, hit a home run with Carey on base. And where did it go? You guessed it—to rightfield. But Weaver cured that rightfield hitting business immediately. He pitched a centerfield single to Harry Davis, a centerfield single to Sammy West, and a leftfield single to Joe Vosmik.

Finally, young Bucky Jacobs got the side out. The recapitulation for the inning: At bat, 12; hits, 8; runs, 5.

There wasn't much the Nats could do about it after that, especially when the Browns picked up a run off young Jacobs in the third and another in the fourth. They hit Syd Cohen hard in the last four innings, but got only one more run.

In desperation, Manager Bucky Harris will send two of his lesser pitching lights against the Browns in a double-header tomorrow. Ken Chase and Ed Linke will oppose Oral Hildebrand and Julio Bonetti on the mound.

When Hildebrand goes into the box it will be his first meeting with the Nats since last month at Griffith Stadium, where Al Simmons threatened to punch him in the nose for throwing a bean ball that broke Simmons' hand. That was the day when Simmons finally ended up fighting Shortstop Bill Knickerbocker. A battle that cost each a $50 fine.

Hunt to Play Allison for Net Trophy

Brookline, Mass., July 23 (AP).—Wilmer Allison, 32-year-old Austin, Tex., tennis veteran, reached the final round of the Longwood Cricket Club's forty-fifth tournament today, brushing aside young Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, Fla., 6—2, 9—7, 6—2, in the semi-finals.

Only 23-year-old Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., the youth Allison picked to win before the tournament, bars the way to permanent retirement of the eighth Longwood bowl, Allison, victor in 1928 and 1934, needing only one more triumph for ownership.

Hunt, husky former Massachusetts Institute of Technology player, qualified by whipping Bob Harman, of Berkeley, Calif., 4—7, 6—5, 5—7, 6—0, in a two-and-a-half-hour struggle. Runner-up for the National intercollegiate and National junior titles in 1935, Hunt's feat of reaching the final of the venerable Longwood tournament ranks as one of the best of his career.

To do it, he had to score over a player who had defeated him twice before this season, but the Washington youth proved equal to the task. Because he repeatedly failed to whip through winning points at set-point—he tossed away five of these in the first three sets—Hunt found himself one set down as he returned from intermission.

He forced himself to the peak, however, in the closing two sets, and, advancing to the net, ripped through Harman with the loss of only one game.

Allison's play against Mully was erratic, as it has been all week. With his injured right forearm in better shape, however, Allison was able to bear down harder than in his earlier contests, but his return of service was woefully weak, and he consistently overdrove the baselines by 4 to 5 feet.

Only when he beat a path to the net behind sharply angled forehand drives was the Texan able to stow away points. In the second chapter he reached set point thrice—in the eleventh and thirteenth games—before Mulloy finally yielded in the sixteenth.

In the women's singles, Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., scored the major upset of the women's tournament, when she defeated Mrs. Sara Palfrey Fabyan, Wightman Cup star, in the semifinals, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5. Her final round opponent will be blond Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., who lost last year's final to Alice Marble, national champion. Miss Pedersen conquered Mrs. Maynard M. Johnson, of Boston, today, 6—4, 6—4.

FCA Net Team Wins Over War Department

The F. C. A. tennis team defeated War Department 3-2 in a Government League match yesterday on the Potomac courts.

Results:

McConnell and Lewis (F. C. A.) defeated Landers and Christenberry, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4.

Brownell (F. C. A.) defeated Rumbaugh McPike, 6—3, 8—6.

Bayer and Anderson (War) defeated Levering and Nelsen, 6—4, 5—7, 11—9.

Wice and Bitonti (War) defeated Bradbury and Repetto, 0—6, 6—1, 6—0.

Vincent and Kosnick (F. C. A.) defeated Phillips and Farbray, 6—4, 6—4.

Bosox Chase Hudlin, Defeat Indians, 6-2

Cleveland, July 23 (AP).—The fourth-place Boston Red Sox chased Willis Hudlin from the mound in the third inning today and won the series opener from Cleveland, 6 to 2.

The invaders battered the dean of the Tribe's slab corps for nine hits, including five doubles, to pile up a six-run advantage which Cleveland's two-run ninth-inning outburst could not overtake, although it removed McKain from the contest.

Boston got only two hits off Denny Galehouse in the last six and one-third innings, but Cleveland's three-game victory streak already was snapped and the Red Sox increased their margin over the fifth-place Indians to four games.

White Sox Hit Timely to Defeat Yanks, 9 to 6, in Crucial Series

Chicago, July 23 (AP).—The White Sox were outclassed in the homer-hitting department, but their safe blows were more timely today and they whipped the New York Yankees, 9 to 6, in the opener of their current series.

Despite Joe DiMaggio's twenty-sixth home run, and four-base blows by Red Rolfe and Jake Powell, the Sox slugged Red Ruffing for 6 runs in the first three innings and coasted in with the win, although a 3-run Yankee surge in the ninth caused several anxious moments.

The defeat ended Ruffing's personal 6-game winning streak, and was the second set-back in a row for the Yanks. As a result, the New Yorkers' American League lead was cut to six games over the Sox.

Johnny Whitehead went for the Sox until the ninth, when Clint Brown relieved him. Whitehead was belted freely, but stopped murderers' row with men on the bases.

His biggest trouble was getting by the first inning, when DiMaggio's homer with Rolfe aboard sent the Yanks away in front.

The Sox bunched four hits, including Mike Kreevich's triple with the bases loaded, to score four runs in the second, and were never headed after that. In the third singles by Rip Radcliff and Luke Appling, a walk, a force-out and a fly added two more runs. Dixie Walker singled another tally across in the sixth, and the Sox wound up with two more in the seventh on Radcliff's single, Appling's triple and an error.

Cubs Rout Hubbell and Giants, 11-3; Lead by Two Full Games

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23.—Chicago's rampant Cubs punched Bill Terry's "meal ticket," Carl Hubbell, full of holes today as they routed the pursuing Giants, 11 to 3, to draw away to a full two-game lead in the hot National League pennant chase.

As a ladies' day throng of 25,559 looked on in astonishment, the Cubs pounded Hubbell from the mound with 13 hits, two of them homers by Ripper Collins and Frank Demaree, and won as they pleased with the veteran Charlie Root starring in the relief role with a five-hit pitching job over eight innings.

Hubbell, in the midst of a new wining streak that had extended six games, was given a 3-to-1 lead after three innings but faulty support upset him and he was pounded like a class B pitcher thereafter. He left after eight innings with the score 7 to 3 against him and his successor, Tom Baker, fared much worse. The Cubs pelted him for five hits and four runs in the final inning as they batted around.

Curt Davis started on the hill for the Cubs but was bounced out after two men were retired. After retiring Lou Chiozza, he pitched a single to Burgess Whitehead and then hit Jo-Jo Moore and Wally Berger with two successive pitched balls to load the bases. Whitehead scored on Mel Ott's long fly, after which Sambo Leslie walked and Mickey Haslin scratched a single through Stan Hack to score Moore and leave the sacks jammed. Root came to the rescue, struck out Eddie Madjeski and then pitched such fine ball that only a home run by Moore in the third caused him any damage.

Three errors and two more misplays that might have been labeled errors worked against Hubbell, although he was hit hard and Moore's superb fielding saved him before the big detonation.

Zay Shows Courage In Delaware Victory

Whips Buck Langhorne by Three-Quarters of Length in Great Stretch Duel; Daily Double Pays $544.20; 9,000 Fans Attend.

By the Associated Press.

Delaware Park Race Track, Del., July 23.—Zay, short on name and long on courage, exhibited her gameness to win the Walnut Green Purse, today's feature race at this turf plant. Running in the green and diagonal white stripes of Mrs. R. H. Heighe, the daughter of Campfire came down to the wire three parts of a length in front of Mrs. K. N. Gilpin's Buck Langhorne. E. R. Bradley's Bootless, the favorite in the field of seven, was third, downed a neck for the place money.

Ridden by Apprentice Jockey Pat McDermott and carrying only 102 pounds, the lightweight of the party, Zay ran an unusual race. Breaking near the top, she took command as the field banked the clubhouse turn but McDermott took her under restraint and she was fourth as the swing for the stretch began.

Battle For Pace.

Wise Sister and Buck Langhorne were battling for the pace at this stage with Bootless, away very slowly, third. With the field nearing the final turn, it appeared that Zay would be hemmed in on the rail. However, the leaders swung out and McDermott shot the mare through the gap. He then went to a powerful hand ride and Zay responded with the speed necessary to take care of Buck Langhorne. In the meanwhile, Wise Sister had stopped and Bootless was hanging due to his strenuous effort in getting to the leaders.

Those among the 9,000 present who backed Zay received $7.50 for each $2 investment. The winner stepped the mile and a sixteenth over a fast track in 1:47 3-5.

A $544.20 mutuel on the daily double combination of Sketchbook and Working Girl provided the monetary thrill of the program.

Chilly Ebbie Wins.

The combination of Chilly Ebbie, the favorite, and Ralph Eccard, apprentice jockey, proved outstanding in the seventh race. The filly went to the front seemingly without effort and coasted along to win by six lengths from Cora Kay. Sir Isaac was third. The winner paid $4.40 and was clocked in 1:49 4-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Ejector, owned by Mrs. J. V. Stewart, won the day's finale at an $8.60 mutuel. Luke Phantom and Miss Tiptoe chased the winner home. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:48.

Honsby Didn't See Harm in Betting.

By Shirley Povich.

St. Louis, July 23.—The suspicion that Rogers Hornsby may have been too vitally concerned with the fortunes of Chief Cherokee in the stretch run at Suffolk Downs at a time when the St. Louis Browns had the tying run on first base and probably needed his undivided attention, was the cause of his release as manager.

POVICH.

The mystery of his discharge was just about dissolved today when the Rajah admitted that he had been asked point blank whether he was betting on the horses. "Yes, what about it?" Hornsby asked Donald Barnes, the Browns' owner, and he soon learned.

* * * *

Barnes reached into his desk, pulled out a brief prepared statement and Hornsby read that he was fired.

"I told Mr. Barnes that was all right with me," said Hornsby, "but there was a little matter of about $30,000 that he still owed me on my two-year contract and that was something I wasn't going to ignore."

* * * *

The Rajah didn't make any bones about his betting on the horses. In fact, Hornsby's habit of risking a few megs on the ponies is one of long standing and once brought him into court on a bookmaker's charge that Mr. Hornsby owed him several thousand dollars.

The last time the Browns were in Washington, as a matter of fact, Hornsby gave all the boys around Griffith Stadium a good thing that romped home at a handsome mutuel and the Hornsby tips were always something to be valued.

"But I never allowed my horse bets to interfere with my management of the Browns," said Hornsby. "If Mr. Barnes thinks the Browns are in seventh place because I was getting down some horse bets, he's mistaken. The Browns are a seventh place ball club because they are a seventh place ball club, if you want the bare facts.

* * * *

"Look up my record as a ball player—when I was good. When I played with the Cardinals and the Giants and the Braves, I was playing the ponies then, too. Those days I was betting often and probably betting more money, yet I was the leading batter in the National League for seven seasons and established more batting records than any other player. Horse betting never interfered with my baseball."

* * * *

"And there's no sin in it anyway. Other people have other hobbies, mine's horses. I hate golf—it's a silly game—and I'm done as a ball player. My horse bets are my own business and I don't see where there's any squawk coming to anybody.

The Browns' ownership, though, apparently thought it had a squawk coming. It was revealed today that Hornsby's clubhouse boy was shadowed for five days by attaches of the front office.

The boy was found leaning over Hornsby's shoulder on the bench while games were in progress, taking a mysterious slip of paper from the Rajah, and, then strolling out under the grandstand through the exit gate, and making his way to bookmakers in the vicinity of Grand and Doder streets around the corner from the park.

But the boy was loyal to the end and denied that he had ever posted a wager for Hornsby. He was dismissed along with Hornsby and Coach Charley O'Leary.

* * * *

Betting on the ponies, though, was not an exclusive hobby with Hornsby. According to the clubhouse boy, "There are many players in the American League who bet on the horses. I try to be accommodating to the boys and early this season I was asked by a member of the Washington team where I could get a bet down. He gave me the money and I made the bet at a bookie shop around the corner. He must have told other players in the league because the first thing you know I was the betting 'runner' for every team that came to Sportsman's Park."

* * * *

The sudden indignation of the Browns' ownership at Hornsby's horse wagers is rather startling, though. If they did not know that their manager was given to playing the ponies, then they are the most naive fellows in baseball. Any ball player or manager could have told 'em that Rajah liked the horses.

There is talk of a mysterious clause in Hornsby's two-year contract which permits the Browns to fire him for "cause," but Hornsby is denying that and is demanding the $30,000 due him. The Browns offered to settle for $5,000, but Hornsby's attorney has advised the Rajah that he had a clear-cut claim to the rest of the money. In fact, if Hornsby doesn't collect on his contract, there's something screwy and he should demand a saliva test, says his lawyer. That piece of paper is a real "good thing." And the court battle doesn't even figure to be close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 23.—Wild Bill Melhorn, of Louisville, Ky., the man in the 8-gallon hat, did a handsome pob of taming the Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course today to take the lead in the opening round of Chicago's $10,000 open golf carnival.

Wild Bill, who has been close lots of times, but hasn't had much luck in winning major tournaments, knocked a stroke off regulation figures for each nine holes, finishing with 35-35—70, for the only subpar score of a long day of shooting. More than 425 professionals and amateurs started out over Medinah's No. 1 and 3 courses in pursuit of the richest medal play pot of the season—$3,000 to the victor.

Melhorn's pace was two strokes faster than the gait of Gene Sarazen, the country squire from Brookfield Center, Conn.; George Smith, veteran Chicago professional, and Henry Ransom, of Bryan, Tex., over the same route and Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Mo., Ky Laffoon, Charlie Penna, all professionals, who posted their scores on the shorter No. 1 course.

Snead, Smith Shoot 73.

Out of the scramble with 73's came the favorite to haul down the grand prize, "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, of Chicago, slender Horton Smith and Jim Foulis, another pair of Chicago pros, and Archie Hambrick, of Decatur, Ill., on the number three layout, and Sam Snead, the West Virginia slammer, and Bud Williamson, a professional from Fort Wayne, Ind., assigned to number one.

The first amateur in line was Gus Moreland, of Peoria, Ill., twice a member of the United States Walker Cup squad, whose effort was a 74 on number one. Tied with him at that figure were Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., Phil Greenwald, Madison, Wis., and Bill Heinlein of Indianapolis, on number three; Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, L. I., Orville White, of Greensboro, N. C., Harry Adams, of Nashville, Tenn., Henry Kaiser, of St. Louis, Sam Bernardi of Chicago, and Clarence Yockey of Kansas City, on number one.

Birdie on First Hole.

Mehlhorn started off by sinking a 6-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the first hole, and rapped in a 65-yard chip shot for another bird on the third. A 25-foot putt, which dropped, gave him his third birdie on the par-five fifth. A weak second shot cost him a stroke on the sixth, and three strokes from the edge of the eighth green was as expensive. On the return journey he was over on the tenth because of a missed 5-foot putt, but he got the stroke back by running down a 2-footer on the seventeenth for a birdie 3.

Mildred Babe Didrikson, the sole woman in the event, got around the first half of her trip in 39 strokes, but needed a 47 for the rest of the journey, finishing with an 86. Melvin (Chick) Harbert, the Battle Creek (Mich.) youngster, who won his State open tournament with a collection of strokes 20 under par, struggled around the course with a tiny splinter of glass in his left eye and finished with 41-41—82.

The "masked marvel," who turned out to be Claud Harmon, former Orlando (Fla.) amateur star, now assistant to Laffoon, shot a 39-42—81 before doffing his disguise.

Haverford, Pa., July 23 (AP).—M. C. Hopper and Bob Patterson, of Tulsa, Okla., won the national juniors' interscolastic tennis doubles title today in a 6—2, 6—0, 8—6 victory over the defending champions, Robert Low and Henry Daniels, of Wallingford, Conn.

Seeded Players Win Their Way To Semifinals

3 Favorites Join McNeil in Eastern Clay Tourney; Upset in Doubles.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23.—Three seeded players joined Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, the National Indoor junior titleholder, in the semifinals of the Eastern clay court tennis singles championship at Jackson Heights today.

John McDiarmid, seeded No. 1, Princeton professor, from Fort Worth, Tex., found Don Hawley, of Orange, N. J., difficult in the first set, but out-steadied him to win, 7—5, 6—2.

Hawley had moved up to the quarter-finals yesterday on an upset victory over Leonard Hartman, of New York, who was fifth on the seeded list. McDiarmid was in trouble early in the first set when Hawley's cross-court attack had him constantly on the run, but Hawley's net play was poor. He came from 1—3 to lead 4—3 in the first set and then lost his advantage on netted balls.

Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., ranked seventh, topped Joseph Fishbach, of New York, 6—2, 6—4, and will meet McDiarmid tomorrow. Cooke was behind, 0—2, in the first set, but outrallied the local youngster to take six straight games. Fishbach tied at 4-all in the final set, but was too tired to go ahead.

Frank Bowden, of New York, sixth on the select list, was forced to three sets in downing William Lurie, of Brooklyn, N. Y., 2—6, 6—0, 6—4.

One upset marked the doubles tournament as it moved into the semifinals. McNeil and Gerin Cameron, of Tulsa, Okla., seeded fourth, were tripped 3—6, 6—4, 8—6, by Julius Heldman, of Los Angeles, and George Ball, El Paso, Tex.

Hornsby, Fired for Race Bets, Settles With Browns' Officials

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 23.—Rogers Hornsby, discharged manager of the St. Louis Browns, surrendered his contract, which did not expire until the end of the 1938 season, and settled his claim against the American League club tonight for a sum estimated at from $7,500 to $10,000.

A peaceful ending to the "Rajah's" differences with the team's owners was reached after an all-day conference in the offices of his attorney, Jacob M. Lashly.

In a statement, worded somewhat ambiguously, Hornsby disclosed he was dismissed because Donald L. Barnes, president of the Browns, and William O. De Witt, vice president, objected to his betting on horse races.

"While my contract did not forbid betting on races," Hornsby stated, "both Mr Barnes and Mr. De Witt have objected to my doing so, but these differences have not entered into the question of my playing ability or the policies of my management. As to those features, I have had a free hand and we have always worked in close harmony."

The one-time star National League second baseman waved aside questioners when he left the conference, but his lawyer, asked to interpret the statement, confirmed that differences over Hornsby's betting activities led to his ouster.

Barnes, who had been represented by his attorneys during the preliminary discussions, joined the conference late in the day. He was jubilant over the Browns' 8-to-0 victory over Washington and remarked with a broad smile, "Everything's lovely."

He and Judge George C. Foster, treasurer of the Browns, were the first to emerge from the conference room. They issued a statement which said:

"Rogers Hornsby, former manager of the Browns, has worked in close harmony with the executives of the company during his term of employment.

"Mr. Hornsby and ourselves disagreed as to certain fundamental principles and therefore we terminated his services, paying him a sum satisfactory to both parties.

"We have the kindliest of feeling toward Rogers and wish him every success in his future activities."

Hornsby's statement, equally pleasant in tone, said:

"I have settled my claim against the American League Baseball Co. of St. Louis, owners of the Browns, on account of my discharge before the completion of my contract as player-manager and I am leaving my connection with the Browns without any hard feelings and with every good wish for their success."

The statement concluded with the contract "upon the payment to me information he had surrendered his of a sum substantially equal to the balance for the year of 1937." The contract was reported to call for a salary of from $18,000 to $20,000 a year.

Ralph Guldahl Says Remarks Misinterpreted

Denies Intent to Reflect on British Sportsmanship by Criticism.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 23.—Ralph Guldahl, America's National Open golf champion, the main speaker on criticism of British sportsmanship among the recently returned United States Ryder Cup squad, said today his remarks had been misinterpreted.

Guldahl, with the other members of the squad which trounced the British Ryder Cuppers but failed to do anything nearly as well as expected in the British Open title tournament, was requested in a telegram from George Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers Association of America, to wire him an expression of regret over anything said reflecting on British sportsmanship.

"The British P. G. A. and the British golfers treated us wonderfully," Guldahl, competing in the Chicago Open tournament, said. "I still think the galleries did things which were not sportsmanlike, but that's likely to happen anywhere. My statements may have given the wrong impression."

Gene Sarazen said he had no complaint over treatment in Great Britain, and did not say that he had no desire to play abroad again. He did say, he said, that he thought it would be his last trip to England, but meant that he was getting too old for such journeys.

Sam Snead and Johnny Revolta, first-time members of the squad, said they had no kicks over anything that occurred.

Horton Smith, a member of the Ryder Cup squad, but who did not compete because of an injury, said he enjoyed the trip, his fifth, but felt that some of the complaints were entirely unfounded. He said members of the gallery were responsible for some small annoyances, but felt they had been exaggerated. Henry Picard, the other cup squad member in the Chicago tournament, could not be reached for comment.

Hazel Bishopp Vies For NetTitleToday

Lucille McDowell, the steady-stroking Burroughs Playground star, will play Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, the tall, trim Takoma Park miss, for the District playgrounds' tennis championship this morning at 10 o'clock on the Chevy Chase Playground courts. Miss McDowell is a slight favorite by virtue of her experience and unusual steadiness.

Last year Lucille was runner-up to Champion Willie O'Steen and since Willie did not defend the title this summer, Miss McDowell became the natural favorite. She is not as hard a hitter as Miss Bishopp nor as strong, but her "gets" are remarkable. Her game is built around the principle of keeping the ball in play.

Though potentially a much finer player, Miss Bishopp's play has been more erratic in the early rounds than that of her Burroughs opponent. She has brilliant form and seemingly has a great future if she desires to devote time to the game.

Columbian League.

The league leading Addisons Chevrolet nine continued its winning streak by defeating the Capital Trash and Hauling Co., on East Ellipse, 8-2. Blank, pitching four hit ball and striking out ten, went the route for the winners as well as hitting safely twice in three trips to lead the batting attack as well.

21 Golfers Will Seek 6 Title Berths

Players From D. C. Area Will Qualify Tuesday for U. S. Amateur.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

An entrant for every three and a half would-be qualifiers will represent the District, Maryland, Virginia and nearby Pennsylvania in the National Amateur, starting in Portland, Oreg., August 23. Six places will be awarded the low scorers as 21 compete at Five Farms next Tuesday, according to the U. S. G. A.

The length of the trip and necessary time off and expense cuts down the local field from the 60-odd place seekers of last year to 21, including Page Hufty, Levi Yoder and Billy Shea, who look like sure bets against the slim field.

Other District entrants include Ralph Quinter, Forest Thompson, Martin McCarthy and Paul Frizzell, while Donald McPhail, finalist in the recent Middle Atlantic event, paces the Baltimore entries.

The Five Farms course, scene of the 1932 National Amateur, will be a severe test to the competitors on Tuesday, and a pair of 78's should get in the lucky half dozen with little difficulty.

Hufty and Yoder are the lone members of the local place seekers to qualify last year, when the black-haired Kenwood ace bowed to the eventual finalist, Jock McLean, in the third round.

Shea, the reigning Middle Atlantic titleholder, will be first off the tee, playing with W. B. Tomlinson, of Richmond. Thompson and Hufty, of Beaver Dam and Chevy Chase, respectively, will play together.

The qualifiers from Baltimore will face another 36-hole medal play test on the scene of the event, as the all match play type of tourney has been discarded. The Maryland State Golf Association, conducting the local rounds for the parent body, announces the following pairings and starting time over the Baltimore Country Club layout:

9 a. m. and 1 p. m.—William L. Shea (Congressional) and W. B. Tomlinson, jr. (Hermitage), Richmond, Va.

9:06 a. m. and 1:06 p. m.—Edgar F. Brown (Rodgers Forge), Rodgers Forge, Md., and David G. Nes (Country Club of York), York, Pa.

9:12 a. m. and 1:12 p. m.—Forrest Thompson (Beaver Dam) and Page Hufty (Chevy Chase).

9:18 a. m. and 1:18 p. m.—Edgar M. Lucas (Baltimore Country Club), Baltimore, Md., and Edward R. Stinebert (Rodgers Forge), Rodgers Forge, Md.

9:24 a. m. and 1:24 p. m.—Martin P. McCarthy (Beaver Dam) and J. C. Fulton (Baltimore Country Club), Baltimore, Md.

9:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m.—J. Crosson Cooper, jr. (Elkridge), Baltimore, Md., and Henry A. Parr 3d (Baltimore Country Club), Baltimore, Md.

9:36 a. m. and 1:36 p. m.—Donald McPhail (Baltimore Country Club), Baltimore, Md., and Ralph D. Quinter, jr. (Chevy Chase).

9:42 a. m. and 1:42 p. m.—J. W. Gitt (Hanover Country Club), Hanover, Pa., and William Shannahan (Hillendale Country Club), Towson, Md.

9:48 a. m. and 1:48 p. m.—Levi Yoder (Kenwood) and Walter R. Neuman (Hanover Country Club), Hanover, Pa.

9:54 a. m. and 1:54 p. m.—Paul J. Frizzell (Columbia), Harris Jones (Baltimore Country Club), Baltimore, Md., and Mark E. Trone (Hanover Country Club), Hanover, Pa.

Heavy Receipts Tumble Corn 6 Cents Lower

Decline for Week Is 20 Cents Per Bushel; Wheat Higher.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, July 23.—Corn closed downward approximately 6 cents a bushel today for July contracts, and showed a collapse of about 20 cents total so far this week.

Trade reports of hidden stocks of corn in Federally licensed elevators, together with notices that a great deal larger deliveries than had been looked for would be made tomorrow in settlement of July contracts, did much today to plunge corn prices lower anew.

With July contracts for about 2,000,000 bushels of corn still awaiting settlement, corn prices tumbled almost from the outset of trading, and reached the day's bottom level a little before dealings ended. Later deliveries of corn than July, however, as well as all deliveries of wheat showed gains at the last.

Chicago corn futures closed all the way from 4½ cents lower to 1½ higher compared with yesterday's finish; July $1.08 to $108¼; September, $1.02¼ to $1.02⅝; December, 77½ to 77⅝. Wheat, 1⅛ to 2⅛ advanced; July, $1.20⅜; September, $1.19¾ to $1.20; December, $1.22¼ to $1.22½. Oats, ¼ off to ⅜ up; September, 33⅜, and rye at ⅛ to 1 cent gain; September, 85¼.

The Market

Stocks Maintain Firm Tone in Moderate Trading; Wheat Prices Gain.

New York, July 23.—On stock volume which again fell short of a million shares, prices hardened in most sections, but a good deal of irregularity appeared. Opening prices in most cases were the best of the day. Bonds moved forward. September wheat climbed 1½ cents to 120 cents a bushel.

Signing of the treaty of surrender of the Administration's representatives in Congress over the Supreme Court packing bill was regarded everywhere in Wall Street as a bull point on business and markets. Opening prices were moderately higher, but no great wave of enthusiasm ran through the trading. The reason why no more effort was made to show confidence over the principal development of recent weeks—or at least since the breakdown of the great C. I. O. drive in the steel industry—probably was that many weeks had rolled over the calendar since anyone took seriously the prediction of an Administration victory on the court issue.

It is altogether probable, nevertheless, that as the significance of the affair soaks in the markets will tend to gather strength. Refusal of Congress, after hearing decisively from the country, to follow the President in the court venture means more than that, with a free court still passing on legislation, a brake on the more extreme New Deal measures can be applied. It also means that numerous odds and ends of radical legislation may not even be proposed. Something is gained when even a partial check is applied to dictatorial policy.

Bull Point.

Another bull point on markets, which the approach of the dog days prevents traders from appreciating, is that Congress soon will adjourn. The period to intervene between the early ending of the session and the beginning of the next one, at which new tax legislation must certainly will be brought up, will be another breathing spell, filled with uncertainties as to the future, but well supplied with statistical evidence of present prosperity.

Week-end money and credit statistics were interesting, but as usual were to be seen only through official bookkeeping smoke screens. The Federal Reserve System reported the first drop in the monetary gold stock in a year and a half, the fall being $19,000,000. Yesterday it was shown that the inactive gold fund declined $41,000,000. With a total lack of information on the transactions of the stabilization fund and gold earmarkings, it is impossible to say how much gold this country actually gave up on the week. Imports for the week of July 21 were a little under $10,000,000.

We have agreed to give gold to China and Brazil, to the former in exchange for silver, and to the latter, presumably, on tick, and doubtless a partial delivery has been made. At any rate, no actual gold exports are taking place. Probably the psychological effect on the markets of gold shipments abroad will be much greater than is that of mere changes on the books. Total Federal Reserve system credit in use declined by about the same amount as the shrinkage in the monetary gold stock, but there was no direct connection between the two changes. The Treasury took funds from commercial banks and deposited them with the Federal Reserve Banks, and excess reserves were drawn down $90,000,000 for the member banks. Probably the Treasury secured some of its deposit cash in exchange for its gold.

Bond Market.

In the bond market the combination of a few weeks of mild credit demand and no more than moderate new financing helped prices as well as did the political developments. The drive of the FDIC against speculative investments of the banks is tending to drive more funds into what the Government naturally regards as not speculative, i. e., Government bonds. On other counts the banks are now tending to increase their Government bond holdings, at least until the September needs are felt. In the foreign exchange a mild reversal of the recent trend took place. Francs weakened after early firmness, but sterling and guilders declined.

Stocks were troubled by light and shifting airs. Opening prices were higher under the influence of the New Deal setback at Washington, but that influence had little driving force. With its good news on earnings to come next Tuesday, steel had to stand further profit taking. Some other steels were lower and a few advanced. One of them was Bethlehem. Rails were mixed.

Great Northern, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific rose 1 to 2 points. Weakness struck Central, B. & O. and Santa Fe. The Alleghany preferreds and 5 per cent bonds of 1950 were injured by doubts over merger and stock exchange lifting privilege for the deposit certificates. Motors softened. Chrysler lost its morning rise of a point. A few of the metals did well, including Kennecott, Anaconda and Cerro de Pasco. North American was a favorite in a firm utility group. Local tractions were well liked. Tide Water responded to an excellent report on profits. Sloss Sheffield, one of the largest point gainers, had a rude shakedown of a dozen points.

Raw Material.

Hardening prices for steel scrap give a hint of what is taking place that is alarming certain public men so much that they propose a Government inquiry into steel scrap and iron buying in this country, with a view possibly to cutting down exports. Undoubtedly vast quantities are going abroad, especially to Japan and Germany. Now that the British seem to have lost control over certain Spanish iron ore mines, inquiry from Great Britain also may have increased, for that nation has a huge rearmament program to carry through. With the whole world increasing its armaments at a rapid pace, the needs of other industries can be filled only at rising prices for raw materials. The steel company with some control over iron ore seems now to be in a highly advantageous position.

Steel Scrap.

Substitution of buses for trolley lines has been a great contributor to the steel scrap market in recent years, but that supply is running low. A Pittsburgh steel company today was unable to buy much steel scrap at a price advance of 75 cents a ton, a new high offer on the present recovery. It may be that the recent strength in steel scrap presages another upturn in steel mill activity this autumn, and if it holds it will mean higher finished steel prices for first quarter of next year.

Utilities.

The public utility section, which acts especially friendless when courts are under attack, took fresh heart at the assurance given the Supreme Court by the Senate's refusal to follow the orders of one who admittedly plans the clipping of public utility activity through Government competition, elimination of holding companies, forcing down of rates, and one form and another of hazing. The Administration has a Grand Canyon full of ideas for extension of the TVA scheme and it may well be that the fate of billions of private investment in the utilities hinges upon the Supreme Court's decisions over the next few months.

Hogs Climb to $13, Highest in 9 Years

Chicago, July 23 (AP).—The $13 top appeared in the Chicago hog market today for the first time since September, 1928. On a 10 to 15 cents higher market, packers paid $13 per hundredweight for choice hogs weighing a little better than 200 pounds. This meant that animals most in demand were worth more than $26 a head. At times in 1932, comparable hogs were worth around $7 per head.

Business Pace Shows End of Summer Halt

Retail Sales Are From 8 to 20 Per Cent Ahead of Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 23.—Most divisions of trade moved forward this week, giving more definite signs of the end of summer slackness, Dun & Bradstreet said today in the weekly review of business.

Retail sales were estimated at from 2 to 6 per cent ahead of the preceding week and from 6 to 20 per cent better than at this time last year; wholesale markets were kept busy with reorders and were rid of the speculative influences which beset them a year ago, and, while vacations forced curtailment in some divisions of heavy industry, others were forced to higher operating rates to meet delivery requirements.

"Helped by store-wide clearances," the Agency said of retail trade, "sales moved ahead steadily all week. Despite concentration of interest in seasonal merchandise, response was generous to half-yearly sales of furniture, bedding and lamps. No consumer resistance was offered to higher prices on initial offerings of fall coats and fur garments."

Favorable Weather.

More favorable shopping weather was noted in most centers, which played its part in enabling stores in New England to report increases over last year of 8 to 16 per cent; Eastern States 6 to 15; Middle West 15 to 25; Northwest 18 to 25; South 12 to 20; Southwest 15 to 30, and Pacific Coast 12 to 18.

The Agency said that factory layoffs in some industrial sections, curtailing spending by workers, was more than counterbalanced by enlarged buying in farm areas.

A high point in industrial divisions was a 35 per cent increase in shipments of pianos over 1936 and the doubling of production of radios for automobiles, both items considered of the purely luxury type.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Doubling One Notrump.

"Dear Mrs. Culbertson: Herewith is a hand which came up in a money rubber bridge game the other day.

North: ♠ A J 10 8 3 ♡ A 8 4 3 ◇ A 7 4 2 ♣ —
West: ♠ 7 6 5 2 ♡ 9 7 5 ◇ J 5 ♣ 9 5 4 3
East: ♠ K 9 ♡ K Q J ◇ K Q 9 8 3 ♣ 10 8 6
South: ♠ Q 4 ♡ 10 6 2 ◇ 10 6 ♣ A K Q J 7 3

"I was sitting South, neither side vulnerable. My partner North opened the bidding with one spade. East bid a notrump, which I, South, doubled, which was followed by three passes.

"After running off six clubs, I led the Queen of spades and the net result was that we made a small slam against the opponents, and they were down six tricks, or 1,100 points.

"It is obxious that with South in the lead and North holding on to his Aces and spades, that the best East could do was to make one trick in spades.

"After the hand was finished, I remarked to my partner and opponents that it happened to be the type of hand on which North and South could not make game in anything with the best defense.

"I am asking you to be good enough to analyze this hand to determine whether my analysis is correct; namely, that North and South could not make game in notrump or any other suit provided, of course, that East and West defended as well as they could defend with the cards they had.

"Yours very truly,
"A. B. Chicago."

Mr. A. B.'s analysis is substantially correct. North and South cannot make game in clubs or notrump against the best defense. Four spades can be made but cannot be reached by logical bidding.

The conclusion must be drawn, therefore, that East's pass to the double of one notrump was criminally risky. He should have run to diamonds. As to South's double of one notrump, this of course was too logical to require comment. Since South was on lead he could count on producing six tricks against the notrump contract; and his spade Queen was a splendid promoting card for his partner's suit.

Too many players with the South hand would have overbid the notrump with two clubs, thus "letting East off the hook." The penalty double is, perhaps, the most powerful weapon in the game; the trouble is that many players allow it to become rusty from disuse.

A Safety Lesson From a Traffic Horror—7 Burn to Death

Pauline Lammers, 29.

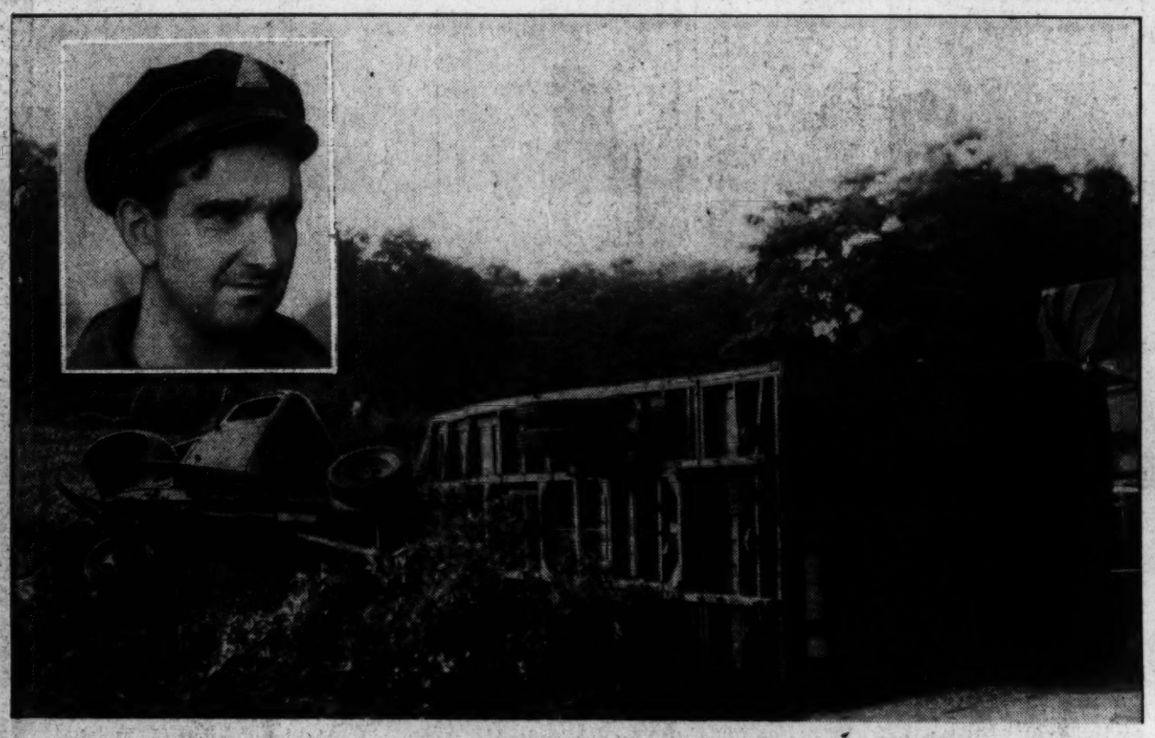
Bernard Lammers, 21.

David Manning, 7.

Francis Baldwin, 14.

Frances Haker, 17.

1. Laughing and singing . . . bound home from an evening of merrymaking at a Glenburnie, Md., carnival . . . lost on a lonely road at midnight. A heavy truck thunders down Robert Crain highway near Upper Marlboro . . . a resounding crash . . . flames . . . and seven young people, all in one car and all related, burn to death. Death takes no holiday on the highways! The seven persons, from 7 to 29 years old, all of near Laurel, Md., took the wrong road on their return home. They had stopped on Crain highway to turn around when the truck crashed against the rear of the car, overturning it. There was an explosion, and the occupants were trapped in flames. David Manning, the youngest, was removed somehow and died shortly afterward of burns at Casualty Hospital. B. M. King, 28, of Mundy Point, Va., the truck driver, was uninjured. He said lights of an approaching car blinded him.



2. King lost control of his truck, which plunged from the road and overturned after careening wildly for about 75 yards. He was taken to Upper Marlboro, where he was booked on a charge of investigation and released on $500 bond to appear at a coroner's inquest Monday. King (inset) then returned to the scene of accident.

3. The car, containing six charred bodies, is still too hot to touch. One man ventures close to the car, but heat from twisted metal prevents the removal of bodies. The carnival spirit is gone. The occupants—gay one second, plunged into an inferno the next—had no chance to escape. The impact of the crash sealed them in a blazing coffin.

4. The three horror-stricken brothers of the Lammers in the car arrive. They are, left to right, Joseph, George and John Lammers, who sped from their home to the scene of the tragedy. They viewed the grim remains of the pleasure outing with the greatest of difficulty.

5. Axes were used to cut away a large portion of the automobile's body to permit removal of the victims. Death struck so suddenly the occupants, crowded as they were, had no time to scramble to safety.

6. With the side of the car removed, the undertaker and coroner faced this sight. Nothing was left but charred masses of flesh and bones and molten metal. The picture plainly shows that several victims were pinned down by heavy seats.

7. At the left, Acting Coroner James H. Truitt and an undertaker remove the bodies, placing them on a sheet, while spectators stand aside, ready to render whatever aid they can. But it is too late to save the once gay party.

8. At the right, the naked skull in the wreckage of the car warns that death is ever present on highways, that Death NEVER takes a holiday. The coroner's inquest will decide who was at fault—if anyone were to blame—but it can not restore life to the once happy and singing party which spent an evening in fun at a carnival . . . laughing and singing.
